Ten reasons to attack Iran

By David Swanson
warisacrime.org

1. Iran has threatened to fight back if attacked, and that’s a war crime. War crimes must be punished.
2. My television says Iran has nukes. I’m sure it’s true this time. Just like with North Korea. I’m sure they’re next. We only bomb places that really truly have nukes and are in the Axis of Evil. Except Iraq, which was different.
3. Iraq didn’t go so badly. Considering how lousy its government is, the place is better off with so many people having left or died. Really, that one couldn’t have worked out better if we’d planned it.
4. When we threaten to cut off Iran’s oil, Iran threatens to cut off Iran’s oil, which is absolutely intolerable. What would we do without that oil? And what good is buying it if they want to sell it?
5. Iran was secretly behind 9-11. I read it online. And if it wasn’t, that’s worse. Iran hasn’t attacked another nation in centuries, which means its next attack is guaranteed to be coming very soon.

6. Iranians are religious nuts, unlike Israelis and Americans. Most Israelis don’t want to attack Iran, but the Holy Israeli government does. To oppose that decision would be to sin against God.

7. Iranians are so stupid that when we murder their scientists they try to hire a car dealer in Texas to hire a drug gang in Mexico to murder a Saudi ambassador in Washington, and then they don’t do it – just to make us look bad for catching them. Oh, and stupid people should be bombed. They’re not civilized.

8. War is good for the U. S. economy, and the Iranian economy too. Troops stationed in Iran would buy stuff. And women who survived the war would have more rights. Like in Virginia. We owe the Iranians this after that little mishap in 1953.

9. This is the only way to unite the region. Either we bomb Iran and it swears eternal love for us, or, if necessary, we occupy Iran to liberate it like its neighbors. Which shouldn’t take long. Look how well Afghanistan is going already.

10. They won’t give our drone back. Enough said.

Freedom

Freedom of speech

Yup, it’s under attack. Always was, ever shall be. That’s what diversity – the real McCoy – is about. Strange new diversions from everything we consider normal do not want this one-of-a-kind newspaper to go on publishing. Yet our “alternate” press is here to stay. Kill or rough up and incarcerate one harbinger of a Weltanschauung that’s different from the confidence game foisted on us by today’s neo armchair warriors, soon there’s a whole new batch of dissenters. Sorry, prostitutes and presstitutes, but that’s how yer cookie crumbles!

This tabloid’s police brutality case against the City of Montgomery is now before the federal court, Middle District of Alabama; the defendants are hoping for better prospects there. Our attorneys L. A. Cobb and Mary Alexander-Oliver having sued them in circuit court where their chances of beating the rap were a bit tougher, they’ve slipped that noose. Temporarily.

We understand this thing may drag on for a year or more. No sweat. No compromise. And no surrender.

HERE’S WHAT WAS IGNORED OR MISREPORTED ELSEWHERE:

We rein in the psychopaths or it’s Armageddon

BRITAIN and the U. S. beg Israel not to attack Iran’s nuclear facilities; the sanctions need time to work. Tehran, currently being visited by U. N. inspectors, isn’t making atomic weapons. But Israel could be on an unstoppable path to a military strike.

IRAN having cut its oil flow to France and the U. K. on Feb. 20, that State now threatens to disconnect more of Europe. Iran’s State TV reports Iranian officials saying oil prices will rise well above $150 dollars a barrel. This is alarming, since the cuts have already sent gas prices to near all-time records in Europe.

THE NEW YORK Daily News reports that Canada has extradited a rabbi to that city who ran a massive immigration fraud mill through his law office for nearly 13 years. Manhattan Federal Court Magistrate Judge Michael Dolinger refused bail bond to Earl Seth David, alias Rabbi Avraham David, who had skipped town before, the rabbi with eleven others having submitted fraudulent paperwork to the immigration authorities on behalf of tens of thousands of illegal aliens who had paid exorbitant fees, up to $30,000 per faked identity.

WHY do top U. S. Senators want to fund al Qaeda Syrian Rebels? First we support “terrorists,” then attack them, and later back them again, as happened in Libya. Today it’s the more vulnerable Syria, as our war hawks look forward to an eventual attack on Iran.

AMERICA, having 2,000 to 8,000, has tried them out on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Russia has between 2,000 and 11,000, the U. K. 100 or 200, Israel 75 to 400, France some 300, China 200, India 100, Pakistan 100 and North Korea possibly up to ten. And we’re worried about Iran getting one?

Scalawag of the Month
Berry Craig

Fe, fi, fo, fum, I smell another Tweedledum

“I imagine the national sesquicentennial observance of the Civil War is boosting the sale of ‘Southern Heritage’ stuff, from caps and shirts to Rebel flag license plates and bumper stickers,” blustered cherubic Berry Craig (pictured here), our prestidigitatious award winner for this month’s top scalawag trophy. In second place were the TSA agents punching air travelers thru chutes in hopes of getting all of us ready for the devil’s branding irons. Quite a few would-be angels are helping Beelzebub’s ambitious One Hell Order conspiracy remain airborne with an occasional infusion of hot air such as Berry Craig’s “Rebel Flags and Locust Plagues” writeup on laprogressive.com. “Confederate banners are flapping from flagpoles all over Dixie and even in border States like Kentucky, where I was born, reared and still live,” he complains. “At the same time, I’m pretty sure another reason

THE EUROZONE is in deep recession, especially in the periphery, but now also in the core economies, as the latest data show an output contraction in Germany and France. The credit crunch in the banking system is becoming more severe as banks deleverage by selling assets and rationing credit, exacerbating the problem.

FAILING to give the people across Europe a proper say about joining the Euro has contributed to the problems facing that single currency, and they are demanding no further treaties without a referendum by all eligible voters.

for the in-your-face Rebel revanchism is because we have an African American president.”

C’mon, sweet innocent. We Southerners got along okay with those Jew-imported Africans via Providence (?!), Rhode Island until their captor/auctioneers persuaded such dupes as yourself to march with a war machine of mass destruction that would later bomb Dresden, Belgrade, Kabul, Baghdad and Tripoli, having first invaded an agrarian folk here in Alabama and tasted a bully-coward’s “victory.” You would no more mix into a fair fight than, say, George W. Bush taking on Saddam Hussein, or that Kenyan in the White House calling Muammar Gaddafi out one on one.

Shocking! Shocking!

You prattle on: “I saw another Rebel flag tee shirt the other day. Such ‘Southern Heritage’ apparel reminds me of my old college history professor. ‘A lot of White Southerners,’ said he, a Louisianan, ‘still have a loser’s complex from the Civil War.’

“The flag shirt was on a White teenager. He was gabbing with a buddy; based on their accents, I suspect they are sons of the South.

“ ‘Never Surrender’ and ‘Protect Your Heritage’ were printed on the shirt below a cluster of four flags that flew over the Confederacy in 1861-1865.

“ ‘Never surrender?’ The kid’s Rebel heroes gave up unconditionally in 1865.

“ ‘Heritage?’ The Confederates bolted the Union in 1860-1861 and provoked America’s bloodiest war because they feared President Abraham Lincoln and his Northern ‘Black Republican’ party would

“Be assured that if this new provision [the 14th Amendment] be engrafted in the Constitution, it will, in time, change the entire structure and texture of our government, and sweep away all the guarantees of safety devised and provided by our patriotic Sires of the Revolution.” – Orville Browning
Sec. of the Interior (1867)

“THE INDIAN government’s ill-advised statement... that it will continue to purchase oil from Iran is a major setback for the U. S. attempt to isolate the Iranian government over the nuclear issue,” wrote Nicholas Burns, former U. S. Undersecretary of State for Political Affairs, in the current-affairs magazine The Diplomat. “India’s decision to walk out of step with the international community on Iran isn’t just a slap in the face for the U. S.; it raises questions about its ability to lead,” Burns added. Er, Mr. Burns, you did mean follow, didn’t you?

make them give up slavery.”

And now for the facts

All of what follows here is verbatim from Compton’s Pictured Encyclopedia, 1942 edition, i.e., prior to political correctness:

The commercial interests of Providence had their beginnings in the 17th century, and in 1711 ship building began. But in those days before the Revolution the ships of Providence were busied chiefly in a great triangular trade in which, it has been said, one-fourth of the signers of the Declaration of Independence were bred, but which we now consider a shameful business for a free country. A ship taking lumber to the West Indies would bring back sugar and molasses to be distilled into rum. The rum would be shipped to the west coast of Africa and there traded for slaves, which in turn were sold in the West Indies or the Southern States to buy more sugar and molasses. Rhode Island merchants were thus the greatest slave-traders in America. Samuel Hopkins said in 1770 that there were 150 ships engaged in the slave trade, 30 distilleries making rum, and that his fellow colonists had “enslaved more Africans than any other colony in New England.”

Seriously, now

This luxury steamer has had an accident crossing the North Sea and is going down. With all lifeboats lowered away, many are still left on board. Given life jackets and told to jump, they hesitate. A crew member notifies the captain, who comes and has a word with them, after which they spring into the water one behind another. The first officer asks how he did that. “Very simple” replies the captain. “To the Germans I said it’s an order. I told the French it’s patriotic. I advised the Japanese this would improve their potency. And, to the Italians, I said springing overboard is forbidden.”

Challenging a Zionist-controlled mediacracy to tolerate the truth

It’s going to take “We the People”

By Chuck Baldwin
chuckbaldwinlive.com

Writing for World Net Daily, Bob Unruh reports a refreshing story of how individual sovereign States are beginning to push back against federal overreach. Unruh writes, “State and local officials in surging numbers are telling Washington they simply won’t cooperate with any plans to detain Americans the federal government may choose to describe as ‘belligerents.’”

“The issue centers on provisions in the National Defense Authorization Act of 2012, signed by President Obama, for the indefinite and rights-free detention of those Washington cites as belligerents, whether American citizens or not.

“WND reported when Rep. Daniel P. Gordon Jr. immediately drafted a resolution in the Rhode Island legislature to express opposition to the sections of the NDAA ‘that suspend habeas corpus and civil liberties.’”

“Now the Tenth Amendment Center confirms that the resistance to the federal bureaucracy is catching on.”

Growing resistance

Unruh continues, “Sources close to the Tenth Amendment Center say as many as ten States will consider legislation or resolutions in response to the detention provisions in section 1021 and 1022 of the NDAA” the organization is reporting. “Law-makers in Rhode Island and Washington will likely introduce resolutions authored by the Rhode Island Liberty Coalition within the next week. Additionally, local governments, including Fremont County, Colorado, and El Paso County, Colorado, have passed resolution condemning the detention provisions.

“Tenth Amendment Center executive director Michael Boldin commented that ‘federal politicians never seem to repeal federal law.

“‘It’s going to take ‘We the People’ in our States to stand up and say, ‘No!’ to this unconstitutional monster,’ he said.”

Unruh reports further, “Already, Virginia Delegate Bob Marshall, R-Manassas, has introduced HB 1160, which would prevent ‘any agency, political subdivision, employee or member of the military of Virginia from assisting an agency or the armed forces of the United States in the investigation, prosecution or detainment of a United States citizen in violation of the Constitution of Virginia.’”

“Mike Maharrey, communications director for the TAC, said the fight is shaping up like the conflict in the 1850s when northern States refused to cooperate with fugitive slave laws that required them to capture and return escaping slaves.

““It is clear to me, and I am far from alone in this view, that the detention provisions in the NDAA are vague,

Your “representatives” – forbidden by the Southern Puberty Lechery Center, a federal Affirmative Action Apparatchik and those new voting machines to display such reminders in a building full of judges, lawyers and politicians – have banished the Ten Commandments from Alabama’s Supreme Court now for 102 months.

overbroad and open to interpretation,’ he said. ‘That leaves me to trust in the good character and moral clarity of Barack Obama, Rick Santorum or whoever happens to reside at the White House, to protect me and my fellow Americans from abuse of his power. No thanks.”’

As I have said repeatedly, the only hope for preserving liberty and freedom is for individual sovereign States to do what they were created to do: protect the rights and liberties of State citizens from the overreach and despotic propensities of the miscreants in Washington, D. C.

If freedom-loving people in the body politic truly intend to see to it that their rights and liberties are preserved, they will pay much more attention – and be much more attuned – to electing State governors, legislators, attorney generals, etc., than they are electing U. S. congressmen, senators, and even electing the President.

With the exception of Ron Paul, there is not a major party Presidential candidate who will make a dime’s worth of difference in protecting the liberties and freedoms of the American citizenry. Both Republicans and Democrats in Washington, D. C., are all about empire-building, foreign interventionism, and expanding the Welfare and Warfare States. Furthermore, none of them (with the exception of Ron Paul) would do anything to thwart or reverse the burgeoning Police State that is currently being rapidly constructed in this country. That means, as Michael Boldin said, “It’s going to take ‘We the People’ in our states to stand up and say, ‘No!’”

Putting the skeer on ’em

And, quite frankly, that’s about the only thing that the power elite in Washington, D. C., are worried about. They aren’t worried about Afghanistan, Iraq or Iran. Those are all orchestrated conflicts to keep our troops fighting endless wars, to have an excuse to print more and more fiat currency, to satisfy the international bankers who are making trillions of dollars off the military-industrial complex, and to give them an excuse of “national security” in order to strip away more and more freedoms from the American citizenry. But State governors, legislators and attorney generals who actually believe the Constitution and who have the courage to defend it, now that scares them to death! Why? Because they know that the real power in this country rests with “We the People” who, through our State governments, have the ability to actually stop their quest for globalism and feudalism.

America’s Founding Fathers clearly understood that the States are the ultimate guardians of the peoples’ liberties. James Madison (and even Alexander Hamilton) spoke to this eloquently in the Federalist Papers.

In Federalist #46, Madison said, “Were it admitted, however, that the Federal government may feel an equal disposition with the State governments to extend its power beyond the due limits, the [States] would still have the advantage in the means of defeating such encroachments [emphasis added]. By “defeating such encroachments,” Madison included “opposition,” “refusal to cooperate,” “frowns of the [State] executive,” “obstructions” and “plans of resistance.”

Did you see that? America’s fourth President and Father of the Constitution said that it was the duty of the States to obstruct, oppose, resist and otherwise refuse to cooperate with any federal policy or mandate that runs counter to the principles of liberty. And, remember, this is from the man who authored the so-called “supremacy clause” of the U. S. Constitution!

The sovereign State

In Federalist #45, Madison said, “Thus, each of the principal branches of the federal government will owe its existence more or less to the favor of the State governments, and must consequently feel a dependence, which is much more likely to beget a disposition too obsequious than too overbearing towards them. On the other side, the component parts of the State governments will in no instance be indebted for their appointment to the direct agency of the federal government, and very little, if at all, to the local influence of its members.”

Not

Did you get that? In the mind of America’s founders, the federal government would be dependent upon the State governments, not the other way around! But what do we hear today? Even these so-called “conservative” politicians and talking heads say just the opposite. They keep insisting that the States are dependent upon, and subservient to, the federal government.

Even the colonists’ biggest proponent of central government, Alexander Hamilton, had it right on the power of the States to resist federal encroachment. In Federalist #26, Hamilton said, “Independent of ... the national legislature itself ... the State legislatures, who will always be not only vigilant but suspicious and jealous guardians of the rights of the citizens against encroachments from the federal government, will constantly have their attention awake to the conduct of the national rulers, and will be ready enough, if any thing improper appears, to sound the alarm to the people, and not only to be the voice, but, if necessary, the arm of their discontent.”

Wow! Did you catch that? Hamilton said that the States held the right and duty to resist federal encroachment with their “voices” and with their “arms.”

Does any of this sound like America’s Founding Fathers expected the States to be lap dogs for federal usurpation of power? They fully recognized that it would take the individual States standing against any potential federal overreach to protect and secure the rights and liberties of the American people.

Citadels of self-government

I will say it again: it is far more important who is elected as your governor than who is elected President. It is far more important who is elected as your State attorney general than who is appointed U. S. attorney general. It is far more important who is elected to your State legislature than who is elected to the U. S. House and Senate. It is far more important who is elected as your sheriff than who is appointed Director of the FBI. But if all you watch is FOX News, CNN, NBC, CBS and ABC, you will be mesmerized with national politics and you will forget about that which is the most important defender of our liberties: our individual State governments. In fact, in many cases today, our State and local governments are as abusive of our liberties as is the federal government. This is mainly due to the inattention and misunderstanding of the People as to the importance of electing local and State leaders who will accept – as their first responsibility – the maintenance of liberty for the people they represent. And, by nature, that means being a faithful watchdog to the incursions of the federal government against our freedoms.

It is encouraging to read that at least ten States are pushing back against the monstrously unconstitutional NDAA. If all fifty States would act as courageously as these tenacious ten – and not just against the NDAA but also against every assault of the federal government on our liberties – America could be restored to the “land of the free” very quickly. As it is, however, the protectors and guardians of our liberties (our State leaders and county sheriffs) are being bribed, coerced, cajoled, harangued and intimidated into cowardly submission by these belligerent bullies in Washington, D. C.

Heroes

Thank you, Representative Daniel P. Gordon, Jr., of Rhode Island. Thank you, Delegate Bob Marshall of Virginia. Thank you to all of you State legislators, State senators and county sheriffs across our great land who truly understand the oath you took to the Constitution and who are willing to stand as the watchdogs of our liberties. It is a truism that if our tribe does not increase, its freedoms are surely lost.

There’s much more to the USS Liberty coverup

Part 2

James E. Akins, a career foreign service officer, was U.S. ambassador to Saudi Arabia before retiring in 1976. He lives in Washington, DC, serves as a consultant on energy matters and travels frequently to the Middle East, Europe and Asia. This article was adapted from a talk given by Ambassador Akins at the Center for Policy Analysis on Palestine in Washington, DC.

Why is what happened on 8 June 1967 “news”? Because it’s taboo.

By James E. Akins
Washington Report On Middle East Affairs

George Ball served as Undersecretary of State under Presidents John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson. He has written:

“Due regard for the lives of America’s naval personnel should have impelled the Navy to urge the State Department to warn off Israel in no uncertain terms; meanwhile the Navy should have alerted the Liberty to its danger and dispatched ships or planes for its protection. But none of these actions was taken in time.”

Ball describes the attack and slaughter of the American seamen and then goes on: “The sequel was unedifying. The administration tried vigorously to downplay the whole matter. Although it silenced the crew, casualties to the sailors and damage to the ship could not possibly be concealed. Thus an elaborate charade was performed. The ship, they rejoined, had not been clearly marked but looked like an Arab ship – which was definitely untrue... In the end the Israelis tendered a reluctant and graceless apology... The sordid affair has still not been erased from the history books; an organization of devoted survivors has kept the cause alive over the years by publishing a newsletter and holding well-advertised meetings.”

Is there any possibility that the U. S. government did not know what the Israelis were doing to the Liberty or that it thought that there was in fact an honest mistake? Senator Jacob Javits of New York said at the time, “Thank Heavens the ship was attacked by the Israelis because we know it was a mistake.” The unstated implication was that an attack by an Arab nation would have been deliberate. No, pace Senator Javits, there was no one at the top of the U. S. government who did not know the facts.

Cold-blooded murder coverup

Dwight Porter, who was ambassador in Lebanon at the time of the attack on the Golan, told columnist Rowland Evans in late 1991 that the CIA station chief showed him during or immediately after the attack the transcript of intercepted Israeli messages. Israeli planes had been given the order by the IDF (Israel Defense Forces) to attack the Liberty but a pilot replied that it was an American ship; the order was repeated, “Attack the ship”; the pilot still didn’t get the point and said he could see the American flag. He was then told harshly that he had his orders: “Attack it.” And, as we sadly know, he did. These facts were published in the Evans and Novak column of Nov. 6, 1991. The columnists got further confirmation from an American-born Israeli major, Seth Mintz, who was in the war room in Tel Aviv at the time of the attack. He is quoted as saying, “Everyone felt it was an American ship and that it was the Liberty... there were comments about the markings, about the flag. Everyone in that room was convinced that it was an American ship.” Mintz told Evans and Novak that “The Israelis were guilty of an outrage.”

The American suppression of the truth is surely an equal outrage. There have also been reports, but never confirmed on the record, that at least one of the attacking pilots was an American citizen. Major Mintz was apparently a dual citizen; at least he was living in Maine at the time he was interviewed by Evans and Novak. It’s too bad that he didn’t make his statements earlier, that he hadn’t renounced his Israeli citizenship at the time and gone public immediately. But that would be asking a lot – too much, in view of the American government’s own efforts to suppress the truth. Ball is certainly right that the Israelis wanted no interference in their plans to occupy Syria’s Golan Heights. The essentials of the Golan problem are well known; they can be described as follows:

From 1948 until 1967 the Syrians sat on the Golan Heights and shelled the defenseless and peaceful Israeli farmers below. This was done out of maliciousness or a desire to be provocative or perhaps just because the Syrians were evil. Clearly this situation had become intolerable to the Israelis and they had not only the right but the duty to change it. And they did; the occupation of the heights – although there may not have been any specific provocation during the Israeli attacks on Egypt and Jordan – was perfectly understandable and justifiable.

These “facts” were widely “understood,” I might even say “universally” understood, in the U. S. Brent Scowcroft, subsequently head of the National Security Council, responded archly when I suggested that the story wasn’t exactly right. “Everyone knows the facts,” he said, “I was just in Israel and I saw for myself what had happened.”

The problem was – and is – that this Israeli version of the Golan is pure fiction. Every one of the 1,000-odd clashes between Syria and Israel between 1948 and 1967 was examined by the U. N. Truce Supervisory Commission, which found that only a very few had clearly been caused by the Syrians. A few dozen were ambiguous and all the rest were caused by Israel. But, many Israelis point out, the U. N. was notoriously anti-Israel, so how could its reports be believed? Well, there were many officers of many nations and they all reported the same thing.

Could they all have been lying? Still, we no longer have to rely only on U. N. documentation. Moshe Dayan, who commanded the Israeli forces in 1967 and had given the order to occupy the Golan, gave an interview to an Israeli journalist, Rami Tal, in 1976. The interview was kept secret until April 1997 – two years ago – when it was published in a leading Israeli daily newspaper, Yediot Ahronot. It has been authenticated by Israeli historians, and General Dayan’s daughter, Yael, a member of the Knesset, insisted that it be published.

In the interview, Tal interjected, “But they were sitting on the Golan Heights and...”

Braggadocio

“Never mind that,” said Dayan, “I know how at least 80 percent of the clashes started. In my opinion, more than 80 percent, but let’s talk about 80 percent. It went this way: We would send a tractor to plow some area where it wasn’t possible to do anything – [it was] in the demilitarized zone – and would know in advance that the Syrians would start to shoot. If they didn’t shoot, we would tell the tractor to advance further, until in the end the Syrians would get annoyed and shoot. And then we would use artillery and later the air force... And that’s how it was.”

Furthermore, Dayan thought that the land would have to be given back to Syria if there was ever to be peace in the region, and taking it would result in the loss of many Israeli soldiers. Then why did he give the order to invade? Essentially it was because of pressure from the would-be settlers who convinced Levi Eshkol, the Israeli prime minister, to occupy the Heights and the fertile lands beyond. When asked if that was all there was to it, Dayan replied, “I can tell you with absolute confidence that [they] were not thinking about [security] they were thinking about the Heights’ land... I saw them; I spoke with them. They didn’t even try to hide their greed for that land.”

Almost but not quite

During the peace talks between Syria and Israel under Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin there was almost full agreement. Israel would withdraw from all of the Heights; there would be demilitarized zones on both sides of the border – more in Syria than in Israel. The main point – perhaps the only significant unresolved issue – was where the final border would be: the international pre-1947 border (the Israeli position) or the 1948 truce line (the Syrian position). A total of less than 15 square miles was at issue.

This encouraging development ended with the murder of Rabin and subsequent rise of Binyamin Netanyahu as Israeli prime minister. Netanyahu agreed to talks with Syria but they had to begin all over again. The Syrians said they wanted the talks resumed but they would have to proceed from positions already agreed. No talks have taken place, showing that sometimes terrorism does pay off; Rabin’s murderer justified his action because of Rabin’s “treason.” And Netanyahu revived the old discredited line that the Golan Heights were necessary to protect Israel’s security.

But back to George Ball’s comments on the Liberty. He concludes: “Yet the ultimate lesson of the Liberty attack had far more effect on policy in Israel than in America. Israel’s leaders concluded that nothing they might do would offend the Americans to the point of reprisal. If America’s leaders did not have the courage to punish Israel for the blatant murder of American citizens, it seemed clear that their American friends would let them get away with almost anything.”

This is hard to gainsay. In fact, the Israelis tried to press their advantage almost immediately. During the 1967 war Israel occupied the entire Sinai Peninsula and among the great prizes of its victory were the Egyptian oil fields which they proceeded to exploit to capacity until the Sinai was returned some 20 years later. But the main Egyptian oil fields were off-shore in the Gulf of Suez.

The Israelis maintained that the new Israel-Egyptian border was the median line in the Gulf and the oil fields were to the east of the line, therefore under Israeli control. General Yitzhak Rabin came to Washington very shortly after the war to press the claim. He said that Israel had occupied the drilling platforms during the war (which might have changed the legality of the matter) but, in fact, the general was lying and we knew it.

That did not deter General Rabin. He hadn’t come to negotiate; he had come to dictate and he proceeded to tell Secretary of State Rusk what “the United States had to do.” He even gave a schedule: this must be done today, this tomorrow and this by the end of the week.

Terrorist dismissed

Dean Rusk was a mild Georgian, a gentleman who never lost his temper, never raised his voice. He was also completely bald, and as Rabin ranted Rusk’s neck turned red, then his lower face, and the red kept rising like a thermometer. When he was completely red he said, quite coolly: “General. We have all heard the Soviet propaganda repeated by President Nasser and others, that Israel is an American colony imposed on the Middle East to enable the U. S. to dominate it. We all know that is nonsense. But I would like to remind you that the United States is not a colony of Israel.”

No end of chutzpah

Sometimes I wonder. But Rabin did not get what he wanted – at least not at this point – a minor and a rare defeat. An even more flagrant example of Israeli certainty that there is nothing it could do against the United States and not get away with was the case of Jonathan Pollard, the spy who did the most damage to America in our entire history, according to Caspar Weinberger, who was secretary of defense at the time of Pollard’s actions. Pollard was a low-ranking official of the Navy Department with a very high security clearance. He was given names and numbers of documents by one or more other Israeli agents in the Defense Department. He then withdrew these documents from the files and took them to an Israeli safe-house where they were copied. He then returned the documents to the files the next working day. Literally thousands of documents were taken, most of which had little if anything to do with Israel. Pollard seems to have considered himself primarily an Israeli, although as far as I know he had never taken Israeli nationality. The case was and is most disturbing for several reasons. (Which we shall cover in the next issue.)

Netanyahu has U. S. presidential hopefuls vowing treason.

Goldman Sachs’ shadow

By Bob Livingston
personalliberty.com

It is well known that Goldman Sachs recommended stocks related to the housing mortgage mania at the same time that it shorted the stocks. Goldman Sachs is the ghost over America, and it is a proxy for the elite crime that has wrecked the country and impoverished the middle class.

Goldman Sachs rules the world for the one percent

The U. S. political system – indeed, that of the whole world – is dysfunctional because it is run by Goldman Sachs for Goldman Sachs. Nobody goes to jail, and there are only hand slaps from the Securities and Exchange Commission. Because of the heavy influence of Goldman Sachs in our government and in governments around the world, it operates above the law and takes every advantage for its own people. This is getting to be public knowledge, but the American people are paralyzed as far as any action by the lapdog U. S. Congress. There is nowhere for the people to turn in a nationwide system of organized crime under the aegis of private investment banks. The recent collapse and bankruptcy of MF Global is a huge factor in eroding public confidence. It appears that client funds (investors), even though segregated, were used to speculate for MF Global’s own account.

Innocent as a Congressman

Jon Corzine, who ran MF Global into the ground, losing vast sums of investor funds, told a Congressional committee that he “didn’t know where the money went.” Corzine is a former CEO of Goldman Sachs and former Governor of New Jersey, a bankrupt State. Some people believe

Corzine is in line to be the next Treasury Secretary in the Obama Administration. The likes of Corzine, Raj Rajaratnam, Bernie Madoff, Rajat Gupta and a legion of legal gangsters are gaming the system to enrich the Wall Street club. When widespread corruption is on the public stage, how long before the collapse of the whole system? The pied pipers of Babylon have no clothes and they have no shame. They fear no prosecution because they remain the privileged elite. These are the same people who ghostwrite things such as the recent 2012 National Defense Authorization Act and then turn the military loose on the American people whom they brand “terrorists and extremists.” They are not oblivious to the coming economic collapse and the fact that they may be victims of the wrath of oppressed Americans and subject to public hanging. This is the expected pattern that develops in the chaos and crisis of the collapse of a despotic government. All this is in the next chapter when national governments default. For those who have eyes to see, it is already beginning. All that is needed now is the trigger. Goldman Sachs doesn’t stop at the U. S. border. Mario Monti, the new Prime Minister of Italy, the new European Central Bank President Mario Draghi and the freshly-appointed Greek Prime Minister Lucas Papademos are all Goldman Sachs alumni. Add to this Petros Christodoulos, Chairman of Greece’s Public Debt Management Agency, who is a former trader for Goldman Sachs in London. This Goldman Sachs network goes on and on all over Europe.

A gathering of rodents

The following is quoted from Marc Faber in his Gloom, Boom & Doom Report of Dec. 31: Two other heavyweight members of Goldman’s European network have also figured large in the euro crisis: Otmar Issing, a former member of the Bundesbank board of directors and one-time chief economist of the European Central Bank, and Ireland’s Peter Sutherland, an administrator for Goldman Sachs International, who played a behind-the-scenes role in the Irish bailout.

Banking as art

Marc Roche then goes on to explain that Goldman Sachs’ trading room benefited from this “capital of relationships.” That may certainly have been the case, but we need to put this network of “friends” in the proper perspective. The other large financial institutions, and for that matter all major corporations, also have their “friends” in high places, plus their lobbyists who can influence the legislative process. In addition, judged by the performance of Goldman Sachs’ stock, the investment bank’s connections have lately been less useful. So, I am not a member of the Goldman Sachs detractor fraternity, as I know well that Goldman only did what all the other financial institutions have done, which is to use the dysfunctional political system and the money-printing central banks to their advantage. However, I will say that Goldman Sachs perfected the art and was therefore better at it.

The point I am driving at is that a reckless meritocracy creates an enormous economic and political mess. Yet, investors are looking at the very same people to solve the problems by implementing appropriate fiscal and monetary policies. But, if one looks carefully at the proposed measures (mostly money printing), it is apparent that they will merely postpone remedying the structural problems and not solve them. I have mentioned this because I see an increasing number of pundits who advocate money printing as the only solution to the problem of bank insolvencies.

Department of Homeland Obscurity just doing its job

By Kurt Haskell

Every victim of a crime in Michigan is entitled to make a statement in open court regarding the impact of the crime on his life. The statement is limited to the victim’s physical, emotional and financial wellbeing as it relates to the crime. Keep that in mind as you read my statement. Below is a copy of the victim impact statement I gave today [16 Feb. 2012] at the Underwear Bomber sentencing hearing. When reading my statement, keep in mind that I am a practicing attorney in the State of Michigan. In addition, I regularly practice in the Court the hearings are taking place at and therefore, I am somewhat limited as to what I can say. We were limited to 5 minutes each.

Victim impact statement

I wish to thank the Court for allowing me these 5 minutes to make my statement. My references to the government in this statement refer to the Federal Government excluding this Court and the prosecution. On Christmas Day 2009, my wife and I were returning from an African safari and had a connecting flight through Amsterdam. As we waited for our flight, we sat on the floor next to the boarding gate. What I witnessed while sitting there and subsequent events have changed my life forever. While I sat there, I witnessed Umar dressed in jeans and a white t-shirt, being escorted around security by a man in a tan suit who spoke perfect American English and who aided Umar in boarding without a passport. The airline gate worker initially refused Umar boarding until the man in the tan suit intervened. The event meant nothing to me at the time. Little did I know that Umar would try to kill me a few hours later as our flight approached Detroit. The final 10 minutes of our flight after the attack were the worst minutes of my life. During those 10 minutes I sat paralyzed in fear.

Unfortunately, what happened next has had an even greater impact on my life and has saddened me further. When we landed, I was shocked that our plane taxied up to the gate. I was further shocked that we were forced to sit on the plane for 20 minutes with powder from the so called bomb all over the cabin. The officers that boarded the plane did nothing to ensure our safety and did not check for accomplices or other explosive devices. Several passengers trampled through parts of the bomb as they exited the plane. We were then taken into the terminal with our unchecked carry-on bags. Again, there was no concern for our safety even though Umar told the officers that there was another bomb on board as he exited the plane. I wondered why nobody was concerned about our safety, accomplices or other bombs and the lack of concern worried me greatly. I immediately told the FBI my story in order to help catch the accomplice I had seen in Amsterdam. It soon became obvious that the FBI wasn’t interested in what I had to say, which upset me further. For one month the government refused to admit the existence of the man in the tan suit before changing course and admitting his existence in an ABC News article on January 22, 2010. That was the last time the government talked about this man. The video that would prove the truth of my account has never been released. I continue to be emotionally upset that the video has not been released. The Dutch police, meanwhile, in this article (show article), also confirmed that Umar did not show his passport in Amsterdam which also meant that he didn’t go through security as both are in the same line in Amsterdam. It upsets me that the government refuses to admit this fact. I became further saddened from this case when Patrick Kennedy of the State Department during Congressional hearings admitted that Umar was a known terrorist, was being followed, and the U. S. allowed him into the U. S. so that it could catch Umar’s accomplices. I was once again shocked and saddened when Michael Leiter of the National Counter terrorism Center admitted during these same hearings that intentionally letting terrorists into the U. S. was a frequent practice of the U. S. Government. I cannot fully explain my sadness, disappointment and fear when I realized that my government allowed an attack on me intentionally.

They do it repeatedly

During this time, I questioned if my country intentionally put a known terrorist onto my flight with a live bomb. I had many sleepless nights over this issue. My answer came shortly thereafter. In late 2010, the FBI admitted to giving out intentionally defective bombs to the Portland Christmas Tree Bomber, the Wrigley Field Bomber and several others. Further, Mr. Chambers was quoted in the Free Press on January 11, 2011 when he indicated that the government’s own explosives experts had indicated that Umar’s bomb was impossibly defective. I wondered how that could be. Certainly, I thought, Al Qaeda wouldn’t go through all of the trouble to plan such an attack only to provide the terrorist with an impossibly defective bomb. I attended nearly all of the pretrial hearings. At the hearing on January 28, 2011, I was greatly disappointed by the prosecution’s request to block evidence from Mr. Chambers “as it could then be able to be obtained by third parties, who could use it in a civil suit against the government.” It really bothered me that the government apparently was admitting to wrongdoing of some kind as it admitted that it was concerned it would be sued. It further upset me to know that the government was putting its own interests ahead of those of the passengers.

When I attended the jury selection hearings, I questioned why versions of the same two questions kept coming up, those being:

1. Do you think you’ll be able to tell whether something is actually a bomb? and
2. Do you realize that the media do not always tell the truth?

I continued to be greatly saddened at this point as I felt the truth continued to be hidden. When Umar listed me as his only witness, I was happy to testify, not on his behalf, but on behalf of the truth. I never expected to testify, as my eyewitness account would have been too damaging to the myth that the government and media are putting forward. A mere 5 days after I was announced as a witness, there was an inexplicable guilty plea which exasperated me as I no longer would be testifying. In closing I will just say that regardless of how the media and government try to shape the public perception of this case, I am convinced that Umar was given an intentionally defective bomb by a U. S. Government agent and placed on our flight without showing a passport or going through security, to stage a false terrorist attack to be used to implement various government policies.

The effect this matter has had on my life has been astounding and, due to this case, I will never trust the government in any matter, ever.

In regards to sentencing, nothing I’ve said excuses the fact that Umar tried to kill me. He has waived his valid claim to the entrapment defense. Umar, you are not a great Muslim martyr, you are merely a “Patsy.” I ask the court to impose the mandatory sentence.

Let us secure justice, and then take pains to preserve it

By Lt. Colonel Donald Sullivan (Ret)
aloe910@aol.com

I wrote an article in 2010 as part of my “Lost Rights” series about the right to trial by jury. You are aware of the lawsuit I filed in November concerning these improperly set courts due to the oath of jurors. I didn’t figure out until 2011 what the problem was with juries. It was their lack of a proper, constitutional oath. With this article I will try to summarize the problem and acquaint the reader with my efforts in the lawsuit thus far, including the extremes the State is going to in order to discredit the lawsuit, and me, and have it dismissed. Anyone who has been convicted in the past 40 years or so will have grounds for an unimpeachable appeal, there being no jurisdiction by the court. Jurisdiction can be challenged at any time.

Why jury nullification isn’t sticking

We are all familiar with the instructions given to a jury by judges everywhere in America: “I have given you the law. If the evidence contained in the facts and testimony presented during the trial show that the defendant has violated the law as I have given it to you, you must find the defendant guilty.”

This lie has been presented to us so many times that we do not question it. We see it on television, in movies and in actual courtrooms constantly, so it must be right. Right?

Yet, how can this be “right” when we all know that some statutes invariably are at odds with those rights protected by our State and federal Constitutions? Laws such as the one under which my son was convicted which made refusing to answer questions a crime; the one which convicted me for openly wearing a sidearm in a courthouse; the one for which I have been ordered not to occupy my house because I didn’t ask permission to build it; the one which requires a driver’s license before exercising the right of travel; etc.?

So, there appears to be a disconnect between the judge’s instructions to the jury and the actual power of an impartial, constitutional jury to rule not only on the evidence presented during a trial but also on the law itself. It took me a while, but I figured it out: The jurors are not given a valid, constitutional oath which binds them to the superior organic law over the inferior statutory law. Instead, they are sworn only to be impartial and to rule based solely on the facts presented at the trial. It is such a simple lie that it has worked for decades.

I “smelled a rat” in 2008 during my trial about the right to bear arms, which I’ve reported on earlier. I found it incredible that I was not allowed to introduce the Constitution as evidence; that I could not mention the “right to bear arms” to the jury; that the prosecutor’s objection to my mention of the authority of the jury to rule on the law and the facts was summarily sustained by the judge; and that the judge warned the jury they would be held in contempt of his order if they so much as looked at, or for, a copy of the Constitution during my trial, since it was not in evidence.

When my son was convicted by a jury for refusing to answer the questions of a State Trooper at a license checkpoint, it hit me: The jury had been compromised!

The people as sovereigns

It is obvious the founders of this country in their wisdom meant for the “right to a trial by jury” to be “a fourth branch of government” wherewith the people could address tyranny directly and exercise final authority over their elected officers. Unfortunately, by cunning and deceit, the judiciaries of the States and the United States have completely eliminated access to the organic law from the jury box.

The federal Constitution specifically requires in Article VI, Clause 3, that “all Executive and Judicial officers, both of the United States and of the several States, shall be bound by oath or affirmation to support this Constitution...” The North Carolina Constitution satisfies this mandate in Article VI, Section 7, thusly: “Before entering upon the duties of an office, a person elected or appointed to the office shall take and subscribe the following oath: ‘I, (Name), do solemnly swear that I will support and maintain the Constitution and laws of the United States, and the Constitution and laws of North Carolina not inconsistent therewith, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of my office as (Title), so help me God.’”

The Snow Queen

By Christine Miller
millercbm@gmail.com

If you’ve never read The Snow Queen, by Hans Christian Andersen – or do not remember it anymore – let me tell you a shortened, in my own words, first chapter of that fairy tale.

The mischief begins

The devil was in high spirits. He had just made a mirror which reflected everything grotesquely in reverse. Beauty was turned into ugliness, good reflected as evil, and everything wise became stupid. After the devil and his minions had had their fun with this mirror on earth, they decided to take the thing up to heaven and put it before God, his angels and paradise. The higher they flew the more their mirror shook, until they could not control it any longer. The mirror crashed down to earth, breaking into a thousand shards. If a fleck of that mirror fell into anyone’s eye it had same effect on the person as did the whole mirror: beauty turned into ugliness, good reflected as evil, wisdom became stupidity.

Updated version

Those men who today administer their public-opinion-shaping businesses must be afflicted with splinters from the devil’s mirror. Creativity that in the past depicted reality, order, harmony and beauty has been turned into “abstract art” which is lauded and praised as “innovative.” Art is now a disconnect from reality; it’s chaotic and ugly.

When the Germans used Zyklon B in the concentration camps, fumigating clothing, bedding and barracks in order to prevent outbreaks of typhus and thereby maintain the health of inmates, some splinter of that devil’s mirror turned it into a “deadly gas” with which Jews were supposedly killed. Final solution! – a positive and innocent phrase – had become a chip off the devil’s mirror, grotesquely distorting those words to mean genocide. Adolf Hitler, the man

North Carolina General Statute 11-11 specifically identifies the position of “juror” as one of the “offices” to be bound by the oath to the “Supreme Law of the Land.” Yet, the jurors only take the truncated oath as follows when they are empaneled, rather than the constitutional oath: “You and each of you solemnly swear that you will truthfully and without prejudice or partiality try all issues in criminal actions which come before you during this session of court and true verdicts render according to the evidence offered therein, so help you God.”

My research shows that this same pattern of deceit is duplicated in every State except, perhaps, Louisiana, it being the subject of “Napoleonic Law” rather than our standard Roman civil law. This “universal deceit” has been enabled through the efforts of the SPLC and the States’ Justice Institute (SJI), a federally funded, nonprofit corporation created by the federal government.

On November 18, 2012, I filed a federal lawsuit against the State of North Carolina, an elected NC Superior Court judge and an elected County Clerk of Court, claiming denial of my right to a jury during the above-mentioned trial on right to bear arms. Since then, I have been bombarded by the State Attorney General with motions to dismiss, (4) motions to strike, objections, personal letters, accusations that I merely am filing for “improper purpose, such as to harass, cause unnecessary delay or needlessly increase the cost of litigation,” etc. He repeatedly refers to me as being “feckless,” “frivolous,” “vexatious,” “obsessive,” “repetitive,” lying, etc., and has petitioned the court to deny me the right to file any further petitions for redress. It is obvious much time and money is being spent to insure that this case is never heard on its merits.

I have filed: Responses to all of the Attorney General’s rantings and ravings; a motion to sanction him for his slander when he confused my case with my son’s and wrote his motion to dismiss as if my son’s case were the basis of the suit; and a motion for a writ of mandamus to force the State to execute its “ministerial duty” to properly swear the jury and insure the court is properly set. I sent in three such filings on Monday of this week. When I checked my mail, there were two new ones requiring answers.

Truth the highest law

The bottom line, as far as I can tell, is that there has been no properly set court with a jury which has taken a valid oath in decades. Therefore, no jury trial held during that time has rendered a meaningful verdict; and all those opinions are subject to being overturned, no matter what the crime. Anyone who has been convicted in the past 40 years or so has grounds for an unimpeachable appeal, there having been no jurisdiction by the court. Jurisdiction can be challenged at any time. Judges and officers have no immunity where no jurisdiction exists.

There can be no “jury nullification” until we get the juries properly sworn, because any juror who tries it under the current corrupt system will be dismissed for cause by the prosecutor during jury selection, or by the judge at any time for any, or no, reason at all. All the good judges are dead. The only hope for such success is in the positive outcome of my lawsuit. Jury nullification will never happen by the voting process.

More to come.

who brought a down-and-out nation back economically, politically and morally, has been made into evil incarnate.

Ron Paul, who, in his wisdom, calls for the United States to turn inward and forgo empire building, is decried an isolationist. He’s in good company. No less a person than George Washington warned the newly founded nation to stay out of foreign affairs and foreign wars, wise counsel. But the men with that chip in their eyes have made the word isolationism into such a negative that few want to vote for an isolationist. The USA has become a war-making nation meddling everywhere, mostly for the benefit of Israel and the Jews.

How it ends

Back to the Snow Queen fairy tale: A splinter from the devil’s mirror had not only entered the eye of little Karl, but one had also penetrated his heart. He had hitched his little sleigh to that of the Snow Queen, who abducted him to her ice palace in the frozen North. She promised him that he would become his own master if, from certain glassy, icy puzzle pieces he could form the word eternity.

Gretchen, his playmate, went in search of Karl and found him alone, blue with cold, in the mile-long ice hall of the snow queen’s palace. Not noticing Gretchen, all of Karl’s thoughts were concentrated on forming the word which would make him his own master. Gretchen shed warm tears over Karl which melted the icy lump and his heart, destroying the splinter.

He suddenly could cry again, those tears washing out the splinter from his eye, and, lo and behold! the puzzle pieces of glaring ice had now formed the looked-for word – Eternity! Klaus was free.

And what had been two children grown into young adults went home towards a warm and green spring. The story ends like most fairy tales: And they live happily ever after.

But what about us?

Did you know all this? I surely didn't

In walking up the steps to the building which houses the U. S. Supreme Court you can see near the top a row of the world's great lawgivers facing a man in the middle who is seated in a full frontal view. This is Moses. And he is holding in his hands the Ten Commandments!

DID YOU KNOW? As you enter the Supreme Court, seen engraved on the lower portions of those two huge oak doors are the Ten Commandments.

DID YOU KNOW? As you sit inside the courtroom, you can see on the wall right there above where the Supreme Court judges sit, a display in plain sight: the Ten Commandments!

DID YOU KNOW? There are Bible verses etched in stone all over the federal buildings and monuments throughout Washington, D.C.

DID YOU KNOW? James Madison, the fourth President, known as “the Father of our Constitution,” made the following statement:

“We have staked the whole of all our political institutions upon the capacity of mankind for self-government, upon the capacity of each and all of us to govern ourselves, to control ourselves, to sustain ourselves according to the Ten Commandments of God.”

DID YOU KNOW? Patrick Henry, the patriot and Founding Father of our country, said:

“It cannot be emphasized too strongly or too often that this great nation was founded not by religionists but by Christians, not on religions but on the Gospel of Jesus Christ.”

DID YOU KNOW? Every session of Congress begins with a prayer by a paid preacher, whose salary has been paid by the taxpayer since 1777.

DID YOU KNOW? Fifty-two of the 55 founders of the Constitution were members of the established orthodox churches in the colonies.

DID YOU KNOW? Thomas Jefferson worried that the courts would overstep their authority, and instead of interpreting the law, begin making law (an oligarchy), the rule of few over many.

DID YOU KNOW? The very first Supreme Court Justice, John Jay, said: “Americans should select and prefer Christians as their rulers.” How, then, have we gotten to the point that everything we have done for 220 years in this country is now suddenly wrong and unconstitutional?

Dear Concerned Student:
I am not allowed in schools.
Sincerely,
God

How did this get started?
Let's see, I think it started when Madeline Murray O'Hare complained she didn't want any prayer in our schools.
And we meekly said, “ok!”
Then someone said you better not read the Bible in school. The Bible that says, “Thou shalt not kill, thou shalt not steal, and love your neighbors as yourself.”
And, again, we weakly said, “ok!”
Dr. Benjamin Spock said we shouldn't spank our children when they misbehave because their personalities might be warped, and that could damage their self-esteem. And we said that a child expert should know what he's talking about, so we agreed not to spank them anymore.
Then someone said, “Teachers and principals better not discipline our children when they misbehave.” And the school administrators said, “No faculty member in this school better touch a student when they misbehave, because we don't want any bad publicity, and we surely don't want to be sued.”

And we accepted their blind reasoning
Then someone said, “Let's allow our daughters to have abortions if they choose, and they won't even have to tell their parents.”
And we said, that's a great idea.
Then some wise school board member said, “Since boys will be boys and they're going to do it anyway, let's give our sons all the condoms they want, so they can have all the fun they desire, and we won't have to tell their parents they got them at school.”

And we said, that's another brilliant idea.
Then some of our top elected officials said it doesn't matter what we do in private as long as we do our jobs.
And we said, it doesn't matter what anybody, including the President, does in private as long as we have jobs and the economy is good.

Someone else took that neo-philosophy a step further and published pictures of nude children; then went still further by making those pictures available on the internet.
And we said, “Hey! everyone's entitled to their First Amendment right of free speech.”
And the entertainment industry said, let's make TV shows and movies that promote profanity, violence and illicit sex. And let's record music that encourages rape, drugs, murder, suicide , and satanic themes ...
And we said, “Heck! It's nothing but entertainment, and has no adverse effect on anything. Nobody takes it seriously, anyway, so go right ahead.”

And now we are asking ourselves why our children have no consciences, why they don't know right from wrong, nor does it bother them to kill strangers, classmates or even themselves.

Undoubtedly, if we thought about it long and hard enough, we could figure it out. I suspect it has a great deal to do with ...

Remember: The ACLU and the ADL – both Jewish organizations, founded by rabid Zionists who put the interests of the apartheid State of Israel ahead of the best interests of the United States of America – are responsible for these incessant attacks on Christianity and the Bill of Rights that have resulted in the moral decay described in the above discussion.
Also bear in mind: ADD and ADHD are pseudo diseases invented by the psychiatric profession as an excuse to put our kids on toxic medications that are the equivalent of chemical lobotomies. This makes them far more docile and extremely receptive to the multicultural ideas set forth by subversive forces that are now misguiding public education in America. American freedoms and American sovereignty are in grave danger of early extinction unless this insidious trend is soon reversed. Exercise your freedom of expression ... or lose it!

Most of this was unknown to me, also, but some of it came to light when I visited D. C. in 2004. The tour drivers there imparted so much knowledge in such a brief span of time, it simply wasn't possible to absorb all of it.
What baffles me is that the average American recognizes what has gone wrong in this country, but is either too naïve or cowardly to stand up and shout the words: It's the @$$% Jews, stupid!
Forty or fifty years ago, the ADL began using the phrase “Judea-Christian principles” in an attempt to put themselves on an equal moral and ethical footing with Christians. Judea-Christian my arse! How many of those traitorous SOBs signed the Declaration or the Constitution? Benjamin Franklin wanted to bar them from entering the U. S. He referred to them as the Devil's children. You just have to love good old Benny.
It is the ADL and the ACLU who are behind every effort to destroy Christianity and repeal the Bill of Rights.
Can't people see that? Every Jew I've ever known – and there have been many – has been a big, blow-hard bag of steer guano. They are good at bluffing, but get in their faces, and they'll turn and run.

In 2005, Associated Press asked with a smirk what had become of the Ten Commandments display at the Alabama Capitol. Gov. Riley's top aide said the Governor had never approved its removal, and the display would soon go back up. He learned, a bit faster than the docile public. Back when Affirmative Action Fedjudge Myron Thompson micromanaged the removal of this State's Supreme Court Chief Justice and the Ten Commandments, we just said... “ok!”

By Cyndi Steele

February 14, 2012 – It’s not bad enough that the government falsely accused my husband of hiring someone to kill me. It’s not bad enough in doing so the government constantly told one lie after another about my husband, about me and anything else that would assist them in wrongly convicting my husband.

It’s not bad enough that the FBI destroyed part of our home during their warrant search. It’s not bad enough they knowingly allowed a bomb to be on my car for days.

It’s not bad enough that after I discovered the bomb and before they had a suspect, they told me they would not provide me protection. It’s not bad enough that their only evidence is recordings that are not true, accurate, unbroken conversations as proven by two top audio experts who determined that they are manipulated, spliced and not even my husband’s voice. Of course, the government with the assistance from the judicial system kept the audio experts from testifying and the jury from even knowing about the experts.

It’s not bad enough that they violated my husband’s rights by denying him attorney-client privileged conversations.

It’s not bad enough that the media vilified my husband and only reported the government’s lies, refusing to fairly report the other side.

It’s not bad enough that they have kept my husband in solitary confinement for most of his incarceration, even before he was wrongly convicted.

It’s not bad enough that they will soon be releasing the man they claim put the bomb on my car.

It’s not bad enough that this caused our insurance company to deny our homeowners and car insurance, unless I divorce Ed.

It’s not bad enough that social security is not only stopping Ed’s social security payments, but demanding that I pay back nine months of payments. It has been my only source of income since Ed’s arrest.

It’s not bad enough that the attorney hired to defend Ed ended up taking the money, throwing Ed under the bus by not providing the defense he promised.

It’s not bad enough that Ed’s attorney was disbarred a month after the trial, and then within a few days following Ed’s sentencing, was indicted for fraud and theft.

It’s so clear that this attorney’s M.O. is to steal from his clients, including Ed, just taking the money without providing a defense.

It’s not bad enough that I have to pay the fines that Ed was charged with along with his sentence, including the portion that he was ordered to pay me, despite that I claimed he owes me nothing.

It’s not bad enough that I have to sell off all my possessions in order to survive.

It’s not bad enough that I have to put our home on the market in order to survive.

It’s not bad enough that they have wrongly convicted him on lies and false evidence.

It’s not bad enough that they have sentenced him to 50 years! A life sentence.

It’s not bad enough that they have designated him to a maximum security prison that is as far from me as they possibly can, with jet-fuel-contaminated water and considered to be the prison they send the worst of the worse (prisoners that commit crimes, such as murder, within the prison system), especially considering Ed has only been assigned 7-8 points, which qualifies him to be designated to a minimal security prison. It takes 10-20 points for designation to a medium security prison and over 20 points for designation to a maximum security prison. No, as the government’s proclaimed victim, all the above and so many other consequences I’ve had to face since Ed’s wrongful arrest on June 11, 2010, is not enough. I am now being denied telephone privileges, email privileges and visitation privileges as stated in the warden’s letter copied here. It doesn’t matter that the BOP’s policies specifically require them to allow spouse visitation up to four hours per month and for them to encourage family visitation.

So, Warden, let me see if I correctly understand your response, “this would diminish the seriousness of the offense.” Aside from the fact that my husband has been falsely convicted for crimes he did not commit, a 50-year sentence (a death sentence) is not a serious enough punishment, so he is to be further punished. Of course, since I’m the one requesting contact, I am to be punished as well? And

Ultimate violation of a State

By Gregory Kay
gregmkay@yahoo.com

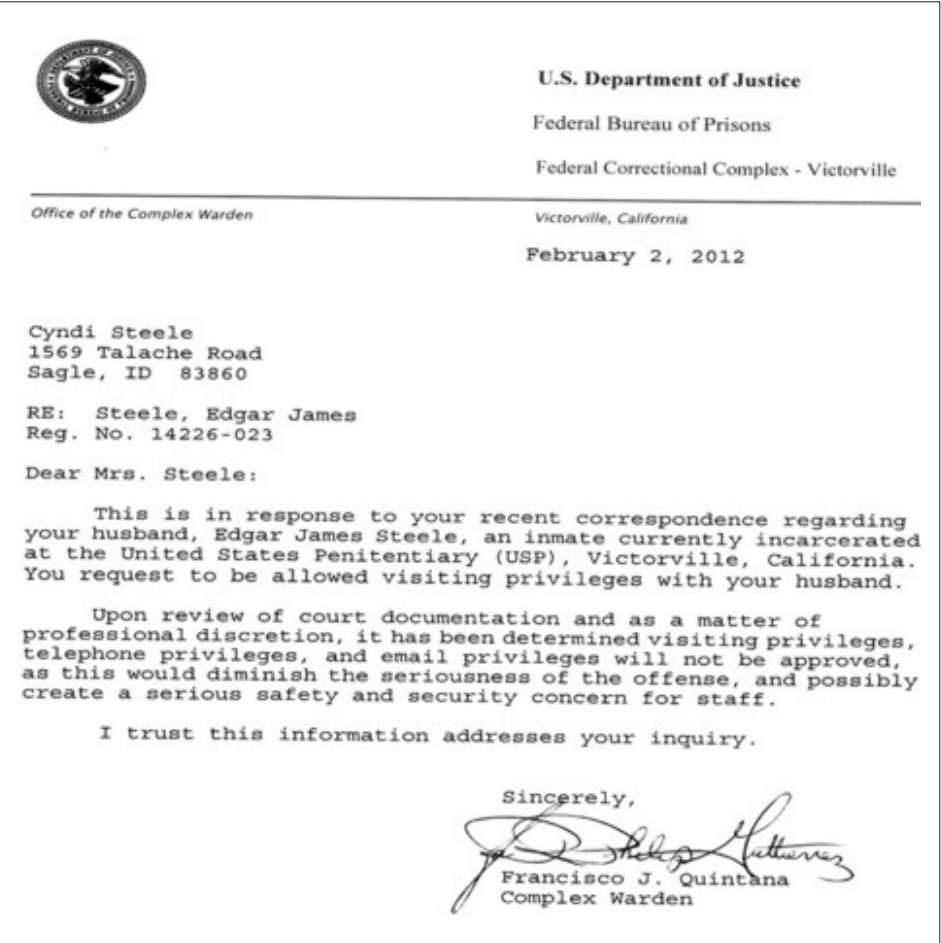

The single greatest violation of States’ rights in the history of these increasingly dis-United States is taking place even as I write this. For the Federal Government is in the process of redefining one State’s borders while giving away part of its sovereign territory to a foreign nation – literally. Alaska is about to lose several of its islands.

Senatorial candidate and Judge Joe Miller of Alaska has revealed a conspiracy by the Obama Administration that literally boggles the constitutional mind. In a series of secret meetings, the State Department has agreed to give seven Alaskan islands – Wrangell, Bennett, Jeannette, Henrietta and Copper Islands, along with Sea Lion Rock and Sea Otter Rock – to Russia, despite these having been Alaskan territory since 1867-1881, depending on the island, with the latter three being officially ceded to the United States by Russia as part of the earlier treaty. Despite their seemingly innocuous names and remote locations, these are not just worthless, barren little rocks sticking out of the icy Bering Sea, either; Wrangell, for instance, covers 3000 square miles, the size of the states of Delaware and Rhode Island combined, and has a population of more than 2,300 people! More importantly, from a strictly economic standpoint, the Russians also get tens of thousands of square miles of surrounding sea bottom that contains oil estimated to range into the billions of barrels. At the current rate, each billion barrels of oil is worth $103 billion dollars, and that’s certainly not chump seriously, you claim that it would “possibly create a serious safety and security concern for staff”? First, how in the world would telephone and email privileges create serious safety and security concerns for staff? There would be nothing sacred or private about our communications since everything is listened to or read. As for visitations, there are so many regulations in place that one is barely allowed to enter with the clothes on one’s back. Besides, I’m a short, lightweight, middle-aged, law abiding woman. I’m frankly insulted by the implication that I present any kind of threat.

All I see is a continued victimization by the FBI, the government and judicial change. So, what does Alaska think of this? Not much. The North Star State was completely excluded from all negotiations involving the dispossession of its own sovereign territory. When it came to light what was happening, the Alaskan Legislature – the legal governing body of that territory – passed resolutions of opposition... and the State Department ignored them.

Loony affair

To help the reader grasp the full implications here, this is equivalent to cutting off the Texas panhandle and giving it to Mexico, ceding Michigan’s Upper Peninsula to Canada or handing over the Florida Keys to Cuba, all not only without permission of those States or the residents of the land in question, but in direct opposition to their desires. In terms of sheer disregard for Constitutional law (although not loss of life and liberty... yet), this action surpasses on a political scale both the invasion of the South and the illegal secession of West Virginia from Virginia; in the former case, even though occupied, the States’ borders were largely sacrosanct, and, in the latter, it was at least put to a vote by some of the people in the affected area and accepted by an act of Congress.

Speaking of Congress, this is worse in another way as well, because Congress is not involved.

Yes, you read that right; Congress will apparently not be voting on the issue of whether to strip a State of its own rightful territory and transfer it to a foreign power. You see, this is being done by “executive agreement,” a redefining of provisions system which I have had to endure for the past 21 months. Not to forget that the true victim is my husband, who has been wrongly convicted by an out-of-control government and judicial officials that really are the true criminals.

How much more do we have to endure before the victimization is stopped? When is someone going to stand up against this injustice being imposed on innocent people? How many more will face this same fate if it isn’t stopped now?

already approved by the United States Congress as part of the 1990 USA/USSR Maritime Boundary Agreement. The Soviet Union collapsed while it was still deciding the issue, however, and Russia wants a new deal. Rather than hammer out another treaty as is required by law, Obama prefers to skirt Congress once again (also the State of Alaska) and do it himself, redefining the border of both the North Star State and the U. S. with the stroke of a pen.

What do Alaska and the United States gain from this? Absolutely nothing; or, at least in the case of the U. S., nothing they are willing to talk about. Russia gains tens of thousands of miles of new and oil-rich territory. So why in the world would Obama agree to this?

It’s because he has something to gain as well: power. Unless Congress decides to do its job and check this action (fat chance!), at the expense of both Alaska and the country, Obama will have created a precedent that gathers more power into his hands than even Lincoln had at the height of his wartime tyranny. When one man can unilaterally define the borders of a country or a State at will, nothing is off the table.

Israeli bulldozer driver murders American peace activist

Nigel Parry and Arjan El Fassed
electronicintifada.net

On 16 March 2003 in Rafah, occupied Gaza, 23-year-old American peace activist Rachel Corrie from Olympia, Washington, was murdered by an Israeli bulldozer driver. Rachel was in Gaza opposing the bulldozing of a Palestinian home as a volunteer with the International Solidarity Movement.

Rachel and seven other ISM activists were in the Hi Es Salam area of Rafah, Gaza, trying to prevent the razing of Palestinian land and property. Present were two Israeli occupation army bulldozers and a tank. For a period of two hours, the activists played “cat and mouse,” trying to prevent the illegal demolitions by physically blocking passage of the two bulldozers.

An emailed report from the Palestine Monitor explained the tragic death of Miss Corrie with the following text as reproduced on a flyer handed out by the International Solidarity Movement (ISM) she was there representing:

“Rachel Corey [sic], 23 years old from the State of Washington, was killed while she was trying to prevent Israeli army bulldozers from destroying a Palestinian home. Other foreigners who were with her said the driver of the bulldozer was aware that Rachel was there, and continued to destroy the house. Initially he dropped sand and other heavy debris on her, then the bulldozer pushed her to the ground where it proceeded to drive over her, fracturing both of her arms, legs and skull. She was transferred to hospital, where she later died. Another foreigner was also injured in the attack and has been hospitalized – at this stage his nationality is unknown.” (15 March 2003)

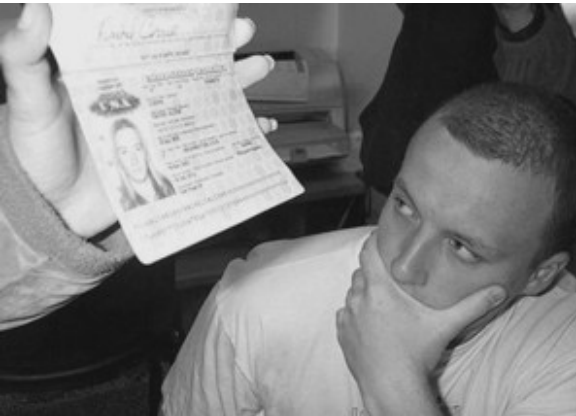

Rationality vs. beastliness

A press release from the International Solidarity Movement stated that: “Rachel had been staying in Palestinian homes threatened with illegal demolition, and today Rachel was standing with other non-violent international activists in front of a home scheduled for illegal demolition. According to witnesses, Rachel was run over twice by the Israeli military bulldozer in its process of demolishing the Palestinian home. Witnesses say that Rachel was clearly visible to the bulldozer driver, and was doing nothing to provoke an attack.” The following photos clearly show that Rachel was well marked, had a megaphone which removes any doubt that the activists’ presence was somehow invisible to the driver, and she clearly posed no threat to the bulldozer driver.

In the instance pictured, the bulldozer did not stop and Rachel was pinned between the scooped earth and the fence behind her. On this occasion, the driver stopped before seriously injuring her.

A later report by ISM media coordinator Michael Shaik in Beit Sahour offered more details about the events:

“The confrontation between the ISM and the Israeli Army had been under way for two hours when Rachel was run over. Rachel and the other activists had clearly identified themselves throughout the confrontation as unarmed international peace activists.

“The Israeli Army is attempting to dishonor her memory by claiming that Rachel was killed accidentally when she ran in front of the bulldozer. Eye-witnesses to the murder insist that this is totally untrue. Rachel was sitting in the path of the bulldozer as it advanced towards her. When the bulldozer refused to stop or turn aside she climbed up onto the mound of dirt and rubble being gathered in front of it wearing a fluorescent jacket to look directly at the driver who kept on advancing.

This photo was taken seconds after the bulldozer driver dragged his blade over her for the second time while reversing back over her body. He lifted the blade as seen in the photo only after he had dragged it back over Rachel’s body. This image clearly shows that had he lifted his blade at any time he may have avoided killing her, as the bottom section of the bulldozer is raised off the ground. The bulldozer continued to advance so that she was pulled under the pile of dirt and rubble. After she had disappeared from view the driver kept advancing until the bulldozer was completely on top of her. The driver did not lift the bulldozer blade and so she was crushed beneath it. Then the driver backed off and the seven other ISM activists taking part in the action rushed to dig out her body. An ambulance rushed her to A-Najar hospital where she died.”

“This is a regrettable accident,” Israeli Defense Forces [sic] spokesman Captain Jacob Dallal was reported as saying in Ha’aretz newspaper. “We are dealing with a group of protesters who were acting very irresponsibly, putting everyone in danger.”

Tens of thousands of people have taken to the streets in Germany to protest against the multi-national Anti-Counterfeiting Trade Agreement (ACTA).

In the German capital of Berlin 10,000 people took to the streets, while thousands more demonstrated in Cologne, Hannover, Hamburg, Düsseldorf and other cities. The largest demonstration was in Munich with 16,000 participants on 12 February.

ACTA is a multi-national treaty that intends to establish an international legal framework for targeting counterfeit goods, generic medicines and copyright infringement on the internet. But critics say that it endangers data protection and criticize the process leading to the treaty as undemocratic.

In addition to the killing of Rachel Corrie by the bulldozer driver, Israeli troops have shot and killed several other internationals in different incidents during the Intifada: German doctor Harald Fischer, Italian cameraman Rafaeli Ciriello and British United Nations worker Iain Hook. Protesters in Germany support the government’s decision to delay ratification of the treaty but want to make sure that it doesn’t get signed in the future.

The agreement was signed on 1 October 2011 by Australia, Canada, Japan, Morocco, New Zealand, Singapore, South Korea and the United States. Refusing to ratify ACTA were Poland, the Czech Republic, Slovakia and Latvia.

In January 2012, the European Union and 22 of its member States signed on, bringing the total number of signatories to 31. The European Parliament is expected to vote on the controversial treaty in June as opposition continues to grow.

EDITOR’S NOTE

Makes you wonder. How long can the Judeos keep fooling us Christians? Indeed, as such pathological mayhem didn’t start yesterday, we oughta wise up and tell Israhell farewell. Voting our NOTA option – “none of the above” – we cease “electing” their stooges here at home who then betray us on not one but every front. Before participating further in this Jewish-rigged “democracy,” we must consider what Walter Williams is trying to tell us now, and remember how the Judeo-mediocracy did it four years ago.

Their selective campaign coverage will again portray the sitting Betrayer-in-Chief as the fool that he is, while offering a supposedly serious challenger, and again they’ll play we who’ve taken the bait for bigger fools by the old switcheroo. Suddenly that challenger (they don’t use amateur actors) is the madman none of us can support. Act 2012 has a cast of millions: all of those receiving government checks wanting no part of change, including Mexicans, Negroes, Liberals, freeloading CEOs, voting machine riggers and dead people. Let’s bid the fedguy farewell and reinstate our States.

Geopolitical stakes in Nigeria: a curious role for the IMF

By F. William Engdahl
voltage.net.org

Nigeria, Africa’s most populous nation and its largest oil producer, is from all evidence being systematically thrown into chaos and a state of civil war. The recent surprise decision by the government of Goodluck Jonathan to abruptly lift subsidies on imported gasoline and other fuel has a far more sinister background than mere corruption and the Washington-based International Monetary Fund (IMF) is playing a key role. China appears to be the likely loser along with Nigeria’s population.

Recent strikes protesting the government’s abrupt elimination of gasoline and other fuel subsidies, that brought Nigeria briefly to a standstill, came as a surprise to most in the country. Months earlier President Jonathan had promised the major trade union organizations that he would conduct a gradual four-stage lifting of the subsidy to ease the economic burden. Instead, without warning he announced an immediate full removal of subsidies effective January 1, 2012. It was “shock therapy” to put it mildly.

Nigeria today is one of the world’s most important producers of light, sweet crude oil – the same high quality crude oil that Libya and the British North Sea produce. The country is showing every indication of spiraling downward into deep disorder. Nigeria is the fifth largest supplier of oil to the United States and twelfth largest oil producer in the world on a par with Kuwait and just behind Venezuela with production exceeding two million barrels a day.¹

Curious timing of the IMF subsidy demand

Despite its oil riches, Nigeria remains one of Africa’s poorest countries. The known oilfields are concentrated around the vast Niger Delta roughly between Port Harcourt and extending in the direction of the capital Lagos, with large new finds being developed all along the oil-rich Gulf of Guinea. Nigeria’s oil is exploited and largely exported by the Anglo-American giants – Shell, Mobil, Chevron and Texaco. Italy’s Agip also has a presence and most recently, to no one’s surprise, the Chinese State oil companies began seeking major exploration and oil infrastructure agreements with the Lagos government.

Ironically, despite the fact that Nigeria has abundant oil to earn dollar export revenue to build its domestic infrastructure, government policy has deliberately let its domestic oil refining capacity fall into ruin. The consequence has been that most of the gasoline and other refined petroleum products used to drive transportation and industry has to be imported, despite the country’s abundant oil. In order to shield the population from the high import costs of gasoline and other refined fuels, the central government has subsidized prices.

Until January 1, 2012, that is. That was the day when, without advance warning President Goodluck Ebele Azikiwe Jonathan announced immediate removal of all fuel subsidies. Prices for gasoline shot up almost threefold in hours from 65 naira (35 cents of a dollar) a liter to 150 naira (93 cents). The impact rippled across the economy to everything including prices of grains and vegetables.²

In justifying the move, Central Bank Governor Lamido Sanusi insisted that “The monies will be used in provision of social amenities and infrastructural development that will benefit Nigerians more and save the country from economic rift.”³ President Goodluck Jonathan says he is phasing out the subsidy as a part of a move to “clean up the Nigerian government.” If so, how he plans to proceed is anything but apparent.

The huge, unexpected price hike for domestic fuel triggered nationwide protests that threatened to bring the economy to a halt by mid-January. The president deftly took the wind out of protester sails by announcing a partial rollback in prices, still leaving prices effectively double that of December. The trade union federation immediately called off the protests. Then, revealingly, Goodluck Jonathan’s government ordered the military to take to the streets to “keep order” and de facto prevent new protests. All that took place during one of the bloodiest waves of bombings and murder rampages by the terrorist Boko Haram sect, creating a climate of extreme chaos.⁴

The smoking gun of the IMF

What has been buried from international accounts of the unrest is the explicit role the U. S.-dominated International Monetary Fund (IMF) played in the situation. With suspicious timing IMF Managing Director Christine Lagarde was in Nigeria days before the abrupt subsidy decision of President Jonathan.⁵ By all accounts, the IMF and the Nigerian government have been careful this time not to be blatant about openly announcing demands to end subsidies as they were in Tunisia before food protests became the trigger for that country’s Twitter putsch in 2011.

During her visit to Nigeria Lagarde said President Jonathan’s “Transformation Agenda” for deregulation “is an agenda for Nigeria, driven by Nigerians. The IMF is here to support you and be a better partner for you.”⁶ Few Nigerians were convinced. On December 29 Reuters wrote, “The IMF has urged countries across West and Central Africa to cut fuel subsidies, which they say are not effective in directly aiding the poor, but do promote corruption and smuggling. The past months have seen governments in Nigeria, Guinea, Cameroon and Chad moving to cut State subsidies on fuel.”⁷ the United Nations (UN) Secretary General, during a meeting with President Jonathan in Nigeria in early January days after the subsidy ended, declared Jonathan’s decision to withdraw it “a bold and correct policy.”⁸

Sachs, a former Harvard economics professor, became notorious during the early 1990s for prescribing IMF “shock therapy” for Poland, Russia, Ukraine and other former communist States which opened invaluable State assets for de facto plundering by dollar-rich Western multinationals.⁹

Making the sudden decision to end the domestic fuel subsidy even more suspicious is the manner in which Washington and the IMF are putting pressure on only select countries to end subsidies. Nigeria, whose oil today sells for the equivalent of $1 a liter or roughly $3.78 a U. S. gallon, is far from cheap. Brunei, Oman, Kuwait, Bahrain, Qatar and Saudi Arabia all offer petrol very cheap to their people. The Saudis sell their oil at 17 cents, Kuwait at 22 cents.¹⁰ In the U. S., gasoline averages 89 cents a liter.¹¹

That means the IMF and Washington have forced one of the poorest economies in Africa to impose a huge tax on its citizens on the implausible argument it will help eliminate corruption in the State petroleum sector. The IMF knows well that the elimination of subsidies will do nothing about corruption in high places.

Were the IMF and World Bank genuinely concerned with the health of the domestic Nigerian economy, they would have provided support for rebuilding and expanding a domestic oil refinery industry that has been let rot so that the country need no longer import refined fuels using precious State budget resources to do so. The easiest way to do that would be to expedite a two-year-old deal between China and the Nigerian government to invest some $28 billion in massive expansion of the oil refinery sector to eliminate the need for importing foreign gasoline and other refined products.

Quite the opposite – the criminal cabal inside NNPC and the Government making huge profits on the old subsidy system are suddenly making double and potentially triple more to maintain the old corrupt import system, and, of course, to sabotage Chinese refinery construction that could put an end to their gravy train.

Cutting their nose to spite the face...

Rather than benefit ordinary Nigerians as the IMF proclaims to want, eliminating the subsidies has further pauperized the 90 per cent living on less than $2 a day, according to Mallam Sanusi Lamido Sanusi, the Nigerian Central Bank governor.¹² An estimated 40 million Nigerians are unemployed in the country of 148 million.

Because transport costs are a significant factor in delivery of food to the cities, food price inflation has soared along with costs of public transportation for the majority of poorer Nigerians. According to the Nigerian Leadership Sunday, “prices of commodities which shot up as a fall-out of the fuel pump price increase have refused to come down.” Everything from street vegetable sellers to roadside photographers to car washes is feeling the shock of this rise in fuel prices. Unemployment rises as small businesses fold.¹³

The argument of the IMF and the

Jonathan Administration is that by freeing fuel prices, funds would be available to more social services and rebuild Nigeria’s “infrastructure.” Both the IMF and the Government know it would have been far more economically viable to replace the current corrupt system of importing refined gasoline and fuels with investing in rebuilding Nigeria’s domestic refining capacity.

Son Gyoh of the Nigerian Awareness for Development organization stated, “Would it not be more expedient to pressure government to service the refineries to full production capacity given the implications on overhead and competitiveness for local industries?”¹⁴

Gyoh pointed to the problem’s source: “Why have successive governments left the refineries in a state of disrepair while spending huge on subsidy? Is there any chance that the savings from subsidy withdrawal will go directly into rehabilitating the refineries? Does deregulation imply NNPC will no longer operate a monopoly in the importation of refined petroleum product or is this lobby a self-serving lifeline to continue its monopoly? “ He concludes, “In any case, there is good reason to doubt subsidy removal will solve the fuel scarcity problem as the cabal will only regroup to change tactics, a fact Nigerians are only too aware of.”¹⁵

After Nigeria partly nationalized its oil sector in the late 1970s, they also took control of Shell Oil’s Port Harcourt I refinery. In 1989 Port Harcourt II refinery was built. Both refineries fell into serious disrepair after 1994 when the Abacha military dictatorship cut the “take” of the Nigerian National Petroleum Company (NNPC) from domestic sale of refined oil products such as gasoline from 84% to 22%. That caused a cash crisis for NNPC and a halt to refinery maintenance. Today only one of four refineries operates at all.¹⁶

What developed since was a system of NNPC importing foreign gasoline and other refined products for Nigeria’s domestic needs, naturally at a far more expensive cost. The price subsidies were to relieve that higher import cost, hardly a sensible solution but a very lucrative one for those corrupt elements in the State and private sector making a killing, literally, off the import process.

NNPC criminal enterprise

The IMF is well aware of the real cause of Nigeria’s fuel industry problems. A Nigerian legislative committee examining the sources of the industry’s problems recently released a report documenting that at least $4 billion annually is taken from taxpayers in fuel industry corruption with the State Nigerian National Petroleum Company (NNPC) at the center. According to the commission, “every day, fuel importers drop off 59 million liters of fuel. The country consumes 35 million liters daily. That leaves 24 million liters of oil available for smugglers to export, paid for by government fuel subsidies. This costs the Nigerian people roughly $4 billion yearly, according to Reuters.”¹⁷

The Nigerian government has said that the 7.5 billion dollars spent yearly on fuel subsidies could be used to provide desperately needed infrastructure. But they omit any mention of the rampant siphoning off of $4 billion of oil by black market smugglers, reportedly with connivance of high NNPC government officials, to sell to neighboring countries at a hefty profit. The refined imported fuel is reportedly smuggled into neighboring countries like

China as IMF target?

One major geopolitical factor that is generally ignored in recent discussion of Nigerian oil politics is the growing role of China in the country. In May 2010 only days after President Jonathan was sworn in, China signed an impressive $28.5 billion deal with his government to build three new refineries, something that in no way fit into the plans of either the IMF, Washington or of the Anglo-American oil majors.¹⁹

China State Construction Engineering Corporation Limited (CSCEC) signed the deal to build three oil refineries with Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation (NNPC), in the biggest deal China has made with Africa. Shehu Ladan, head of NNPC, said at the signing ceremony that industries. Last September on a visit to Beijing, Nigeria central bank governor Lamido Sanusi announced his country planned to invest 5 percent to 10 percent of its foreign exchange reserves in China’s currency, the renminbi (RMB) or yuan, noting that he sees the yuan becoming reserve currency. In 2010 China’s loans and exports to Nigeria were more than $7 billion, while Nigeria exported $1 billion of crude oil, Sanusi stated.²¹

Until now Nigeria has held some 79% of her foreign currency reserves in dollars, the rest in Euro or Sterling, all of which look dicey given their financial and debt problems. The move of a major oil producer away from dollars, in addition to similar moves lately by India, Japan, Russia, Iran and others, augurs bad news for the continued role of the dollar as dominant world reserve currency.²² Clearly some in Washington would not be happy with that.

The Chinese are also bidding to get a direct stake in Nigeria’s rich oil reserves,

The new blacklist

By Patrick J. Buchanan

My days as a political analyst at MSNBC have come to an end.

After 10 enjoyable years, I am departing, after an incessant clamor from the left that to permit me continued access to the microphones of MSNBC would be an outrage against decency, and dangerous.

The calls for my firing began almost immediately with the Oct. 18 publication of Suicide of a Superpower: Will America Survive to 2025?

A group called Color of Change, whose mission statement says that it “exists to strengthen Black America’s political voice,” claimed that my book espouses a “White supremacist ideology.” Color of Change took particular umbrage at the title of Chapter 4, “The End of White America.”

Media Matters parroted the party line: He has blasphemed!

Unnatural complainers

A Human Rights Campaign that bills itself as America’s leading voice for lesbians, bisexuals, gays and transgendered people said that Buchanan’s “extremist ideas are incredibly harmful to millions of LGBT people around the world.”

Their rage was triggered by a remark to NPR’s Diane Rehm – that I believe homosexual acts to be “unnatural and immoral.”

On Nov. 2, Abe Foxman of the Anti-Defamation League, who has sought to have me censored for 22 years, piled on.

“Buchanan has shown himself, time and again, to be a racist and an anti-Semite,” said Foxman. Buchanan “bemoans the destruction of White Christian America” and says America’s shrinking Jewish population is due to the “collective decision of Jews themselves.”

Well, yes, I do bemoan what Newsweek’s 2009 cover called “The Decline and Fall of Christian America” and editor Jon Meacham described as “The End of Christian America.” After all, I am a Christian.

And what else explains the shrinkage of the U. S. Jewish population by six percent in the 1990s and its projected decline by another 50 percent by 2050, if not the “collective decision of Jews themselves”?

Let error be tolerated, said Thomas Jefferson, “so long as reason is left free to combat it.” What Foxman and ADL are about in demanding that my voice be silenced is, in the Jeffersonian sense, intrinsically un-American.

Consider what it is these people are saying.

They are saying that a respected publisher, St. Martin’s, colluded with me to produce a racist, homophobic, anti-Semitic book, and CNN, Fox News, C-SPAN, Fox Business News and the 150 radio shows on which I appeared failed to detect its evil and helped to promote a moral atrocity.

If my book is racist and anti-Semitic, how did Sean Hannity, Erin Burnett, Judge Andrew Napolitano, Megyn Kelly, Lou Dobbs and Ralph Nader miss that? How did Charles Payne, African-American host on Fox radio, who has interviewed me three times, fail to detect its racism?

How did Michael Medved miss its anti-Semitism?

In a 2009 cover story in the Atlantic, “The End of White America?” from which

Is this writer alone forbidden to broach the subject?

Nothing new, just queer

That homosexual acts are unnatural and immoral has been doctrine in the Catholic Church for 2,000 years. Is it now hate speech to restate traditional Catholic beliefs?

Documented in the 488 pages and 1,500 footnotes of Suicide of a Superpower is my thesis that America is Balkanizing, breaking down along the lines of religion, race, ethnicity, culture and ideology, and that Western peoples are facing demographic death by century’s end.

Are such subjects taboo? Are they unfit for national debate?

So it would seem. MSNBC President Phil Griffin told reporters, “I don’t think the ideas that (Buchanan) put forth (in his book) are appropriate for the national dialogue, much less on MSNBC.”

In the ten years I have been at MSNBC, the network has taken heat for what I have written, and faithfully honored our contract.

Iran. Though eight wells have been already drilled in the field, only two wells are meant for heavy oil production. The field’s in-place heavy crude reserves have been estimated at about one billion barrels.

Kouhkaki oil field is located northeast of Kouhmond about 15 km south of the city of Khormoj where only one well was drilled in 1973. The field contains light crude with estimated in-place reserves of about 780 million barrels.

Boushkan oil field is located 100 km north of Bushehr and 30 km from Dalan gas field. The field’s in-place reserves have been estimated at about 340 million barrels with a single well drilled in 1963.

The fields will be developed in two phases to produce 11,000 barrels per day (bpd) of crude oil after the completion of until now an Anglo-American domain. In July 2010, China’s CNPC (China National Petroleum Corporation) won four prospective oil blocks – two in the Niger Delta and two in the frontier Chad Basin – with plans to become core investor in the Kaduna refinery, and construction of a double track Lagos-Kano railway.²³ As well, China’s oil company CNOOC Ltd has a major offshore production area in Nigeria.

The IMF and Washington pressure to lift subsidies on imported fuels is at this point in question as is the future of China in Nigeria’s energy industry. Clear is that lifting subsidies in no way will benefit Nigerians.

More alarming in this context is the orchestration of major new terror killings and bombings by a mysterious and suspiciously well-armed Boko Haram. This we will look at next with Nigeria’s recent transformation into a major narcotics hub.

an undeniable victory for the blacklists.

The modus operandi of these thought police at Color of Change and ADL is to brand as racists and anti-Semites any writer who dares to venture outside the narrow corral in which they seek to confine debate.

All the while prattling about their love of dissent and devotion to the First Amendment, they seek systematically to silence and censor dissent.

Without a hearing, they smear and stigmatize as racist, homophobic or anti-Semitic any who contradict what George Orwell once called their “smelly little orthodoxies.” They then demand that the heretic recant, grovel, apologize, and pledge to go forth and sin no more.

Defy them, and they will go after the network where you work, the newspapers that carry your column, the conventions that invite you to speak. If all else fails, they go after the advertisers.

A total of 18 heavy and extra-heavy oilfields have so far been discovered in Iran, including Ferdowsi oil field in the Persian Gulf, which is one of the country’s biggest heavy oil fields with proven reserves of more than 31 billion barrels.

Iran’s total in-place oil reserves are estimated at more than 560 billion barrels with about 140 billion extractable barrels. Moreover, heavy and extra-heavy varieties of crude oil account for roughly 70-100 billion barrels of the total reserves.

Iran holds the world’s third largest proven oil reserves and the second-largest natural gas reserves.

In flinching move, Finkelstein slams boycott movement

By Sean O’Neill
australiansforpalestine.net

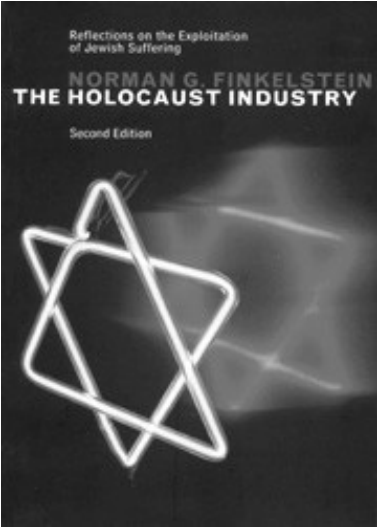

The interview with Norman Finkelstein that circulated all over the web on 15 February, in which he calls the boycott, divestment and sanctions (BDS) movement against Israel a “cult” and compares it to Maoism is, I think, a milestone of sorts.

Or, more accurately, the symptom of a milestone – a sign that the ground is shifting on Israel/Palestine issues.

Normal Finkelstein has made a career out of being the son of holocaust survivors who doesn’t shy away from picking a fight with Israel’s backers, and who unabashedly defends the rights of Palestinians. At times his controversial positions have set his career back, as when he was denied tenure at DePaul University. However, on balance he has certainly benefited, as a less combative scholar would today likely be simply one of thousands of obscure political science professors.

The Bilcox approach

Everything about the interview is classic Finkelstein: his demeanor, his tendency to raise his voice, and that adversarial, passionate approach – everything, that is, except for the things he’s saying. In a bizarre turn of events, he comes off as a Zionist bully, or, for that matter, any other angry right wing pundit. He accuses activists for Palestinian civil rights of having a secret agenda, that of destroying Israel. He seems obsessed with some overarching concept of the Law as final arbiter in all matters, as though in this case we weren’t talking about a variety of laws, many of which at times contradict each other, and as though there

One of his earlier books

In the last few days, an interview with Norman Finkelstein has been going viral on Facebook in which he called the BDS movement a “cult” and says that its rights-based demands are simply a cover for the dismantling of the State of Israel. It’s an appalling claim that has left a lot of activists shocked, since Finkelstein has been quite a hero of the Palestinian movement for some thirty years. Zionist extremists have been crowing with delight about his stance on twitter and the blogosphere, while some activists are trying to defend him by saying he is a realist and that people are being too emotional about his statements. Well, that argument should be applied to Norman Finkelstein. He was the one being emotional, insulting, accusatory and condescending. Furthermore, Norman needs to remember that the Palestinians are resisting every day for their freedom, many of them dying, losing their homes, being forcibly separated, and that they are entitled to use BDS as a tactic to put pressure on Israel. To call the movement a “cult” is particularly insulting to a people for whom international law has failed miserably. As much as Finkelstein has done for Palestine, he is just one of many who have put their lives, careers and reputations on the line. Yet, at the end of the day, there is not one international activist who can truly understand what it is like to be a Palestinian living under the oppressive conditions of Israeli domination or being hopelessly outcast in a refugee camp, and, I say, how dare any of us, no matter how well meaning, to condescend and tell the Palestinians how they should resist. BDS is the first campaign that is beginning to bite – and now we have Finkelstein on the one hand saying it will never achieve anything while on the other that he has no problem with it. This excellent rebuttal to Finkelstein’s unfortunate rant is given by Sean O’Neill, who worked for the Christian Peacemaker Teams in the South Hebron Hills and is currently an MA candidate at New York University.

isn’t a history of the law being written, enforced and misinterpreted by political actors at the expense of the weak. His complaint that solidarity movement activists want to cherry pick which laws they respect is reminiscent of the claims made by White religious leaders that Dr. Martin Luther King so famously refuted in his “Letter from a Birmingham Jail.”

Moreover, Finkelstein conveniently ignores the fact that international law recognizes refugees as having a right to return to their homeland. When the law becomes inconvenient, Finkelstein employs another classic conservative tactic, insisting that the public simply won’t accept the demands of the activists, that they need to be more pragmatic. Again, see “Letter from a Birmingham Jail” for an eloquent refutation of such logic.

Denying the debunking

Finkelstein even resorts to the desperate tactic of denial. When the interviewer puts forth his contention that the BDS movement is growing in popularity, Finkelstein rejects the idea out of hand, comparing the movement to some Maoist group he apparently was affiliated with at some point in his more idealistic youth.

Few takers

I recently witnessed BDS’s growing clout at a meeting I attended with a woman working for an Israeli artist, helping set up a series of salons in New York to explore and question the Birthright Israel programs, and the idea of a “birthright” in general. The project sounds very interesting, but the woman was visibly frustrated at their inability to find people willing to work with them in the city. They are partially funded by the Israeli Consulate, and as a result have had the proverbial door shut on them by activists, artists and professors, Arab and Jew alike. This would have been incomprehensible five years ago, when I first heard of the BDS movement at the annual Bil’in conference and it was, at that point, divisive even among conference attendees.

The new paradigm

Here is where things stand now. There is a paradigm shift in the works in how the Israel/Palestine conflict is understood and approached. There’s an increasing consensus among Israel’s critics to see the issue as one of civil rights rather than a conflict between two nations. Indeed, some BDS activists harbor a desire to see the end of the Jewish State, and others believe this is the inevitable outcome of a civil rights movement, whether they desire it or not. But many others, I would argue most Palestinians among them, simply don’t care about this abstract One State vs. Two States argument. They just don’t think civil rights – indeed human rights – can be trumped by someone’s nationalist claims.

End of the line

Finkelstein’s sudden hostility to the solidarity movement is a symptom of this paradigm shift. It is easy to rail against Israel when the existence of a Jewish nation-State seems guaranteed in perpetuity. But that guarantee seems to have eroded a bit. For some this will be scary. But then change always is. It was scary in South Africa. It was scary in the Jim Crow American South. For others it is liberating, and you can count among these an increasing number of Israelis who see coexistence – real coexistence, not the tenuous kind that reigns in Jaffa, among other places – as a more attractive guarantee to their security than the ethnocratic State. As the ground continues to shift, some of those who are afraid will flinch, and retreat to safer, more moderate arguments. Finkelstein flinched.

“Chutzpah,” a foreign word, explains the inexplicable

By Olaf Childress

It’s sickening, not knowing what to believe; yet the pattern continues unfolding exactly as Henry Ford told the world in 1921: whether they’re forged or not, the Protocols correctly predict all of these recessions and wars piggybacked on each other “as if” by design.

Elsewhere in this issue we bring you, hum, a rabid rabbi story typical of their penchant for crime, and could as easily fill these 24 TFF pages with such news anytime by simply scanning the non-Kosher New York papers. Abe Foxman is fuming, but those newspapers still exist.

Yet not even a Victor Thorn can predict where the Mossad will false-flag next, so we’re pretty much dependent on the habits of Israel’s secret agents, along with what’s spelled out in the Protocols, for such pointers.

We do know that the little Rogue State of Apartheid Israel has access to, and also on hand, copious supplies of every weapon our country has developed and then some, including those magnetic bombs slapped onto Iranian scientists’ vehicles by Mossad motorcycling agents sent to murder them.

We know the Mossadniks and Bushniks had foreknowledge of 9/11, else why were those five dancing Israeli agents prepared and already filming the event even as the first plane hit?

We know this berserk Rogue Apartheid State refuses to admit the so-called United Nations into its inner sanctum to inspect a stockpile of over 200 A-bombs at the same time absurdly demanding that Iran open its doors to the said authorities. Why absurd? Iran does comply with all of civilization’s reasonable requests.

Matter of fact, Saddam Hussein’s Iraq stood fully open to inspection when little George Bush, just following orders, loosed hell on that sovereign State knowing quite well the mediacracy’s “weapons of mass destruction” story was a total fabrication.

Our people have become inured to such lies. And, knowing who the liars are – the apparatchiks, political whores and typical media flunkies – we expect those terrorists in control of the money, media and military industrial complex to keep right on lying gullible Americans into wars and rumors of wars however long it takes until we, the good guys, put ourselves in charge.

The other team

Just who are “we”? Let me spell it out. I’m talking about people who not only ask for, but get, answers – such as where is the law? – ordinary folks, capable and surely no less intelligent than the ones we’re up against, even if some kook temporarily in charge of the federal “justice” circus aligns himself for reassurance with his kind and issues a “news release” that Constitution-packing sovereign citizens will henceforth be considered dangerous. Know what? To those usurpers, we are, and I’ll also make this plain. The Jewish mediacracy is enemy number one. We’re outflanking that nest of civilization’s subverters with an upcoming Aryan changeover. It will take quite a few dozing TV watchers by surprise, as did the 1960s lurch into the slough we now must drag them mumbling and confused back out of.

Once our reporters put their boots on the ground worldwide and false flagging is no longer a safe stunt, those Mossadniks will spend more time safely crouching in their closets, though the paranoia cannot cease.

Such desperados, during that interim, may even stop for awhile endangering the lives of their own kind when setting up and luring Aryans into traps just to keep a false Jewish pathos and an equally-unfounded White guilt trip alive.

Our reporters won’t settle for an Osama bin Ladin’s body “dumped at sea to avoid problems”; they’ll consider that a major problem.

After the changeover, people will have access to the results of honest journalism, such as: Who planted that magnetic bomb? Why was a cameraman, exactly for those few brief moments when what looks like 100 gallons of gasoline gone up in flames, Johnny-on-the-spot? Who was he?

Semite attacks U. S. ally with depleted uranium stones

What if the news media were to report that missiles launched from the Iranian coast had hit a U. S. aircraft carrier with deaths and casualties?

By Bill Sardi
LewRockwell.com

“We interrupt this broadcast for an important news bulletin.... We take you to reporter Manfred Smith on the aircraft carrier USS Abraham Lincoln in the Persian Gulf for this special report.” (Reporter Smith): “I’m here on the deck of the USS Abraham Lincoln where casualties are being taken from the USS Carl Vinson which sustained damage earlier today in a shocking pre-dawn attack on U. S. Naval forces here in the Persian Gulf. At least one hundred body bags are now housed in a makeshift morgue below decks, and casualties are running in the hundreds. Radar tracking shows evidence of sea-skimming missiles, likely shoulder-fired, possibly as many as three launched from the coast of Iran, that struck the Vinson amid-ships. You can see in the distance smoke billowing from the USS Vinson now some six hours after the sudden surprise attack. U. S. Navy authorities said the close proximity of the ship to the coast made it impossible to defend against this missile attack. The USS Eisenhower remains positioned 30 miles further away from Iran’s coast than the USS Vinson. U. S. military authorities are saying a swift and decisive retaliatory blow against Iran is now underway and U. S. military aircraft are now attacking pre-determined military targets with full force. Iranian authorities in Tehran issued a denial of their involvement in the attack, but an Iranian mullah is claimed to have said, I quote: ‘This should serve the Great Satan notice they don’t belong here.’ Iranian President Ahmadinejad had previously warned Iran would retaliate against sanctions imposed by the U. S. on his country. This is Manfred Smith with XXX News aboard the USS Eisenhower in the Persian Gulf.”

If the American public were suddenly shocked by the news that three shoulder-fired missiles launched from the coast of Iran had hit a U. S. aircraft carrier in the Straits of Hormuz and killed 200 navy personnel, would even one American question whether this report was accurate in its assumption that the regime in Iran was behind the missile attack?

How easy it would be for any party that wanted to instigate war to place saboteurs on Iran’s coast to aim shoulder-fired missiles at a U. S. aircraft carrier positioned near the Straits of Hormuz where a third of the world’s oil tankers pass every day.

The very first posting I submitted to Lew Rockwell over a decade ago was entitled “Remember The Maine.” It was about events, all at sea, that triggered all the modern major world wars. All were staged events. I repeat them here:

“Remember the Maine”

February 15, 1898: Mysterious explosion rocks the battleship Maine in Havana Harbor, Cuba. 266 men were killed. Initially it was believed a torpedo or mine caused the explosion. On April 25, 1898 the U. S. declared war on Spain. A 1976 investigation found that the Maine was sunk due to a self-inflicted blast, probably as a result of coal bunker fire on board.

Legitimate war target

May 7, 1915: The British steamship Lusitania was sunk by a German torpedo on the high seas of the Atlantic Ocean. 100 Americans lost their lives. The result was the U. S. was brought into WWI. It was not revealed at the time that the Lusitania, a passenger boat, was carrying arms and munitions.

No surprise

December 7, 1941: How was President Roosevelt going to convince the American public to enter into war with the Japanese when the U. S. was headed for war with Germany? Japanese bombers, launched from aircraft carriers, bombed Pearl Harbor and sunk the U. S. Pacific Fleet in a so-called surprise attack. Over 2,000 died. The U. S. knew of the threat of war and had intercepted the “East-Wind Rain” secret code of the Japanese Pacific fleet. Japan had closed all its embassies in the Pacific rim the week prior to Pearl Harbor, which is an overt sign of war. U. S. aircraft carriers had been removed from Pearl Harbor days before the bombing.

Admiral Kimmell in Hawaii was intentionally kept in the dark that the Japanese fleet was nearby. A surprise attack it wasn’t. The U. S. Navy actually fired the first shots, launching depth charges at the entrance to Pearl Harbor after detecting an unidentified submarine an hour before Japanese aircraft bombed U. S. Navy ships moored in the harbor. President Roosevelt appeared before Congress, declared Pearl Harbor a “day in infamy,” and the rest is history.

“Great Society” warrior

August 5, 1964: President Johnson orders the U. S. to take retaliatory action against Vietnam after “renewed attacks against American destroyers in the Gulf on Tonkin” (Vietnam). There were no new attacks against American ships.

The news media reported a lie, leading over 50,000 Americans to their deaths and millions of casualties.

Liars on parade

October 12, 2000: A small bomb-carrying vessel swiftly approaches the USS Cole, an American destroyer, docked in Yemen to re-fuel. An explosion rips a gaping hole in the side of the ship. Eighteen sailors die and 35 others are Alabama, we will aye be true to thee!

The Alabama Illegal Immigration Law is working; illegal aliens are self-deporting! Unemployment is down! Tax dollars paid in public benefits to illegal aliens are down!

Why then, would the Alabama attorney general and legislators want to weaken our great law? The battle to keep HB56 intact is between social conservatives and certain business interests who want taxpayers to fund their cheap illegal labor.

Attorney General Luther Strange has recommended repealing parts of HB56 that have illegal aliens leaving our State while the judicial process is still underway. He seems to have a strange desire to surrender.

Senator Gerald Dial has taken the AG’s torch and run with it. He submitted SB140 for repeal of most sections recommended wounded. The bombing occurs on the eve of the Presidential debates, with rumors of Iraq moving troops in the Middle East and riots in Jerusalem. Benjamin Netanyahu, former prime minister of Israel, says during a television interview that the same people who conducted terrorism in Jerusalem bombed the USS Cole.

Don’t be duped into going to war solely based on reports of bombings of U. S. Navy boats in far off lands where we the facts of the event are completely controlled by one source, the government. Remember the Maine!

Scene 3, Take 2

There is a similar situation today. Avi Perry, a former intelligence expert for the Israeli government and professor at North-western University, recently wrote this in the Jerusalem Post:

“Iran, just like Nazi Germany in the 1940s, will take the initiative and ‘help’ the U. S. president and the American public make up their mind by making the first move, by attacking a U. S. aircraft carrier in the Persian Gulf.

“The Iranian attack on an American military vessel will serve as a justification and a pretext for a retaliatory move by the U. S. military against the Iranian regime. The target would not be Iran’s nuclear facilities. The U. S. would retaliate by attacking Iran’s navy, their military installations, missile silos, airfields. The U. S. would target Iran’s ability to retaliate, to close down the Strait of Hormuz. The U. S. would then follow by targeting the regime itself... under this ‘Pearl Harbor’ scenario, in which Iran had launched a ‘surprise’ attack on the U. S. Navy, the U. S. would have the perfect rationalization to finish them off, to put an end to this ugly game... 2012 will see to a new war. This time, Iran will initiate it.”

It is difficult to educate a largely patriotic American population that the U. S. has done this in the past, and is likely in the future to provoke America into a military conflict not only by issuing propaganda to soften up the masses against an alleged enemy like Iran, but also incite the enemy to “fire the first shot” or deceive Americans into believing the enemy instigated the war. U. S. sanctions against Iran are now beginning to take economic effect and the regime there is talking about austerity measures.

Desperate moves

Didn’t the U. S. government foresee its current economic collapse, and knowing America’s reliance upon oil from the Middle East, which sucks money out of America with no offsetting exports to these Arabic countries other than military weapons, plan to overtake these oil-rich foreign countries and capture their oil?

The U. S. is the world’s largest consumer of petroleum. The U. S. purchases about $1 billion of oil every day from overseas sources. This has led to a miserable balance of trade situation. So why not demonize oil-producing countries to soften up the American people into the idea of capturing their oil under the guise that pre-emptive action needs to be taken against these foreign countries before they attack first?

The U. S. is becoming more energy independent by fracking oil from the earth’s crust, but it can’t control oil-producing countries with its purchasing power as easily as it had in the past. For example, Iran sells a great deal of its oil to India via Turkey serving as an intermediary. India is not participating in the sanctions against Iran. Furthermore, India is paying Iran in rupees instead of using the U. S. dollar as reserve currency for trade.

New Pearl Harbor

Thanks to the internet it is more widely known that the U. S., one year prior to 9-11, published a document entitled “Project For A New American Century” that outlined how the U. S. intended to dominate global trade and finance by a policy of military domination and deceptive provocations. This document called for “some catastrophic and catalyzing event, like a new Pearl Harbor,” which would galvanize U. S. public opinion in support of a war.

Sadly, busy Americans are not likely to realize that financially-broke regimes go to war to hide their economic sins. Bank holidays can be declared, currency devalued, reckless spending justified, freedoms restricted, all because America is now under wartime rules.

Stonewall in the Shenandoah Valley

Schedule of commemorative events

By Gregg Clemmer
examiner.com

Down the I-81 corridor from Winchester to Lexington, Virginia’s Shenandoah Valley is preparing to commemorate the 150th anniversary of Jackson’s Valley Campaign. From museums and cemeteries to forts and battlefields, you can visit and absorb the history and heritage of that time.

But if you’re into a chronological tour – and following the campaign fight by fight – start with Jackson’s opening battle at Kernstown, his only defeat, scheduled for March 24 at the Pritchard-Grim Farm and Rose Hill Farm.

Meeting the invaders

On April 27-29, travel to Elkton to relive with reenactors, Stonewall Jackson’s Grand Encampment centered in and around the Miller-Kite House and Museum. Here, take in Jackson’s restored headquarters where he and General Ed “Allegheny” Johnson planned a secret, lightning attack on Union General Robert Milroy’s forces west of Staunton, securing the Valley Campaign’s first victory at McDowell.

The following weekend, May 4-6, park your car atop Shenandoah Mountain west of Staunton to walk the works of scenic Fort Edward Johnson, then proceed to a full re-enactment of the Battle of McDowell, where horse-drawn wagons tour living history encampments amidst historian talks scheduled in the village.

VMI’s New Market Day Parade and Ceremony, held every May 15 – is a full dress military parade to honor those who “died on the Field of Honor” at the Battle of New Market on this date in 1864. This spring, while on campus, pause a moment at the graves of six of the New Market fallen in front of the Preston Library, then walk over to the Four Apostles – “Matthew, Mark, Luke and John” – the storied four guns of the Rockbridge Artillery that backed up Stonewall on so many fields. And while in Lexington, you can also tour Stonewall Jackson’s Home, visit his grave in the Stonewall Jackson Memorial Cemetery, and then pay your respects to the Lee Chapel on the campus of Washington and Lee University, where Robert E. Lee and his family are entombed.

As a bonus, the New Market Battlefield State Historic Park will not only hold the 148th anniversary reenactment of the 1864

Battle of New Market on Sunday, May 20, but this year they are hosting the reenactment of Jackson’s victory in the First Battle of Winchester on Saturday, May 19. And despite the temptation to spend hours in the park’s Virginia Museum of the Civil War, a half hour’s drive over to the Luray Valley Museum on the evening of the 19th will get you “An Evening with Stonewall Jackson.”

Top generals

Yet the place “to meet” the most civil war “personalities” will be in Winchester on June 1-3, when the “Gathering of Eagles” at the Old Courthouse Civil War Museum brings together several dozen living history rebels and yanks ranging from Lee, Longstreet, Jackson, Stuart, and Mosby, to Grant, Meade, Sherman, Joshua Chamberlain, and yes, George Custer!

Because Cross Keys and Port Republic are on private property, these last two battles of the Valley Campaign will be reenacted at Middletown near the Cedar Creek & Belle Grove National Historic Site; Cross Keys on June 9, Port Republic on June 10.

Where it happened

Yet if you are moved to walk the ground on the actual anniversaries of the fighting, the National Park Service in cooperation with the Shenandoah Valley Battlefields Foundation will be hosting a series of

EDITOR’S NOTE

Comrades: Do not forget, April is Confederate History and Heritage Month, whether your town’s weekly newspaper remembers or not; and we won’t talk about those big dailies that aren’t permitted to stop drooling over MLK Month long enough to observe this Sesquicentennial’s events from a more truthful perspective. So please send your announcements, scalawag nominations, articles or whatever is important next month, and reserve a box of The First Freedom’s special April edition for both history buffs and the awareness-handicapped. The latter especially, who know not what the South was – and is – about.

on-site tours – “150 Years Ago...On This Day” – starting at Kernstown on March 23, then to McDowell on May 8, Front Royal on May 23, Middletown on May 24, Winchester on May 25, Cross Keys on June 8, and Port Republic on June 9. A campaign summary and closing ceremony – Stonewall Jackson’s Way: Remembering the Valley Campaign – is scheduled at Grand Caverns on June 16, featuring living history participants, candle-lighted cave tours, and an in-cave ballroom dance!

And this only begins to touch on all there is to see and do in the Shenandoah Valley this spring. So distance yourself from metropolitan traffic, be it a day trip or a long weekend, and rediscover your country’s history.

Cameron asks Scotland for a “no” vote on independence

Scotland gaining independence via devolution instead of secession? Someday maybe Dixie will too. But 700 years is a long time to wait.

By Juliette Jowit
guardian.co.uk

David Cameron made his boldest move yet in the campaign to stop Scotland voting for independence by offering the country more freedom from Westminster if it votes no in the coming referendum.

Speaking to business leaders in the capital, Edinburgh, the prime minister said the referendum did not have to be “the end of the road” for devolution. After that, “I am open to looking at how the devolved settlement can be improved further,” he said. “And, yes, that means considering what further powers could be devolved.”

However, in a move that immediately provoked angry reaction from Scotland’s pro-independence first minister, Alex Salmond, Cameron repeatedly ruled out discussing what powers could be further devolved to Edinburgh before the vote.

“That must be a question for after the referendum, when Scotland has made its choice about the fundamental question of independence,” Cameron said.

The surprise offer, described by one member of the audience as having an air of desperation, appeared to form part of a two-prong strategy.

The prime minister first outlined a series of veiled threats about the problems raised for Scotland leaving the United Kingdom, including the potential loss of a seat on the U. N. security council, U. K. armed forces, and the pound. He also added two new ones to those he had raised in a speech on 15 February: the loss of the U. K. security services and difficulty of combating terrorism alone.

Stacking the deck

Having raised these concerns, he made the offer of more devolved freedom in the U. K., an idea similar to the concept of “devo max” which Salmond wants offered as a second option in the referendum. Under this watered-down version of independence, Scotland would remain part of the U. K., with a single currency and defense force, but have control over domestic policy and the economy.

Iranian, Russian navies in Syrian waters

AlexanderHiggins.com
A senior Iranian lawmaker says the presence of Iranian and Russian naval forces in Syria’s coastal waters is a clear warning to the U. S. to refrain from any possible military adventurism.

Russian warships arrived at the Syrian port city of Tartus on Sunday, January 8.

“The United States should take Iran’s warning about [refraining from possible] military intervention in Syria seriously,” Hossein Ebrahimi, deputy chairman of Iran Majlis National Security and Foreign Policy Committee, said on 19 February.

He added that in the event of any U. S.

strategic mistake there, Washington may receive a crushing response from Iran, Syria and a few other countries.

On Sunday, January 8, a large Russian naval flotilla led by an aircraft carrier had arrived at the Syrian port of Tartus in the Mediterranean Sea for a six-day port call to show Moscow’s solidarity with Damascus.

“The port call is aimed at bringing the two countries closer together and strengthening their ties of friendship,” the official SANA news agency quoted Russian naval officer Yakushin Vladimir Anatolievich as saying.

Two Iranian Navy ships also docked in the Syrian port of Tartus on 17 February to train Syrian naval forces as agreed by Tehran and Damascus one year ago.

“Syrians are against any form of foreign intervention in their country, but the United States by arming opposition groups is trying to harm the [anti-Israeli] axis of resistance in the region [in order to] affect Islamic Awakening in regional countries,” Ebrahimi added.

The lawmaker went on to say that the recent dispatch of a number of unmanned military and intelligence drones operating in Syrian skies by the U. S. military will only result in more solidarity among the Syrians.

Who is threatening whom?

Is Syria set to be the Tonkin Gulf “incident” for our attack on Iran?

By Daniel McAdams
informationclearinghouse.info

Michael Lofgren, an old friend who recently retired after a long career analyzing House and Senate national security budgets, has an excellent piece in the Huffington Post in which he admits that after dismissing the decades of scare reports on Iran by the war-mongers he is suddenly a bit more worried about a possible attack on Iran.

Writes Lofgren:
During this presidential campaign season, there is on the GOP side the most toxic warmongering political dynamic imaginable: one that makes Bush look like a pacifist in retrospect. President Obama for his part is trying to triangulate à la Bill Clinton between the GOP, a Democratic base that is mostly antiwar but politically ineffectual, Israel, the military-industrial complex and his polling numbers.

Lofgren warns that with “the U. S. and Iran... reprising the Gulf of Tonkin in the Strait of Hormuz... these factors compose a brew potentially so toxic that one would think it would give even the most belligerent chickenhawk pause before quaffing it.”

But what if Syria itself is the Gulf of Tonkin rather than the cat and mouse games around the Hormuz Strait?

Let us consider a few points:
First: The atrocity stories are mostly cooked-up to make the case for Western military intervention.
Human rights groups like the “Syrian Observatory for Human Rights” are the sole sources of information for events on the ground in Syria, even though the SOHR is based in London, has no contact information, no street address, no email address, no list of officers or employees. The sole responsible person listed, Rami Abdul Rahman, is in fact not a real person at all, as the organization admits, but rather is “just an alias that was being used by all SOHR members.” Readers: have a good look at their website and decide if you would base a U. S. war against Syria on the credibility of this organization providing the “atrocity stories” about Syria. The only other mention of a real human attached to this organization is the below photo, whose caption reads: “Rami Abdelrahman, head of the Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, leaves the Foreign and Commonwealth Office after meeting Britain’s Foreign Secretary, William Hague, in central London November 21, 2011.” (Thanks to Land Destroyer blog for first pointing out the curiousness of the Syrian opposition coordinating with the U. K. government.)
It is this organization that has been almost the exclusive source of the horror stories coming out of Syria, such as the tale of Assad’s callous murder of 18 premature babies in Homs – dutifully reported on 10 February 2012 in the U. K. Independent newspaper and last August on CNN! For a full and compelling report on the pro-war propaganda campaign being cooked up by the Syrian Observatory for Human Rights and dutifully amplified by our complicit media, see the 11 February 2012 excellent piece on Infowars.

I guess nothing says “let’s go to war” like the old babies in incubator stories. Who can forget that poor 15-year-old Kuwaiti girl, known only by her first name who kills whom, it is always, as Hillary Clinton says, the government murdering peaceful protestors.

Now the Syrian opposition propaganda machine warns that Assad might be “mulling” the use of chemical weapons in Homs! First the babies, then this!

So these bomb attacks on the Military Security Directorate in Aleppo follow a familiar pattern of rebels targeting Syrian security forces and taking out scores of

45 U. S. bases surround Iran

Each star is a U. S. base. But, just to be clear, Iran is the one that is threatening the U. S.

MAP PROVIDED BY JOANECOLE.COM

of Nayirah, who told us harrowing tales of Saddam’s ruthlessness: “While I was there, I saw the Iraqi soldiers come into the hospital with guns, and go into the room where... babies were in incubators. They took the babies out of the incubators, took the incubators, and left the babies on the cold floor to die.”

No kidding?

Except, as we now know, she turned out to be the Kuwaiti ambassador’s daughter and the tale was cooked up in the PR offices of Hill & Knowlton with the collusion of the late, war-loving U. S. Rep. Tom Lantos...

Likewise, the Syria Observatory for Human Rights was the source of last month’s stories of “hundreds murdered” in Homs, conveniently on the day before the U. N. Security Council was to vote a U. S./U. K./French regime change resolution. The absurdity that Assad would be insane enough to go Rambo on his cities the day before the U. N./NATO’s Libya liberators decided whether or not to invade was lost on most observers, who see what they want to see in these situations once the narrative has been established. That is why just a day later when “hundreds” became “dozens” and many of those dozens turned out to be Syrian security forces killed by the famed unarmed democracy protestors, nobody noticed. The narrative was set. No matter civilians in the process. The Syrian opposition groups, i.e., Syrian Observatory for Human Rights, again makes the claim that in fact Assad is blowing up his own military and intelligence facilities. Rational people might judge for themselves whether a leader attempting to put down an armed insurrection in his country would start by blowing up his own military. Alas, rationality has been thrown out the window in the frenzied rush to regime change.

Second: Once burned, twice shy – or, the pitfalls of falling for the propaganda.
The Russians and Chinese, whose skepticism on Libya proved to be very well placed and who as a result vetoed the recent Syria “regime change” resolution in the U. N. Security Council are doubly skeptical on Syria, and having been proven right on Libya should be accorded a degree of attention this time. That is why when

U. S. adoptions criticized

presstv.ir
Moscow has called for an immediate ban on the adoption of Russian children by American citizens amid increasing numbers of child cruelty cases by the U. S. adoptive parents.

In a statement issued on 11 February, the Russian foreign ministry said adoptions by U. S. families should be suspended until the international adoption agreement signed by the two countries on 13 July 2011 comes into force.

“Against the backdrop of an unending series of crimes in the United States against Russian children, the Russian foreign ministry believes... it expedient to suspend the adoptions procedure for U. S. citizens in the Russian Federation,” the statement said.

According to Russian authorities at least 17 Russian children have died in domestic someone like Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov says that those pushing the UNSC resolution on Syria were “hysterical” and “indecent” the world should listen. The Russians urged that any resolution call for an end to all violence – on the part of the government and on the part of the rebels (based in Turkey and armed by Qatar and the West). Their urging that both sides stop shooting rather than just the government side was ignored by the U. S./U. K./NATO/GCC regime changers.

Third: Western militaries and secret services are already in the vicinity.

We must consider reports of U. K. and Qatari special forces troops operating in Syria (alongside their U. S. counterparts no doubt). One reason to believe these reports is that they have been denied by the British government.

Fourth: Has Iran really thrown Syria under the bus?

Presidents Ahmadinejad of Iran, Russia’s Putin

We have heard reports, most recently on 10 February 2012 from RT, that Iran was sending some 15,000 special forces into Syria to help its government defend against rebel attacks.

Fifth, and finally: Why is Syria being readied as the next target?

Chutzpah on steroids

The U. S. is “reviewing military options” against the Syrian government. U. S. bases literally surround Iran and Iran may have lent military assistance to its ally, Syria. The Israelis have been champing at the bit to attack Iran, but fear having to go it alone. When the U. S. begins military action against Syria, what are the chances that a huge Iranian attack on U. S. forces in Syria or vicinity might be manufactured? What would be the U. S. response considering the “toxic” pro-war brew that Mike Lofgren points out is currently being quaffed in Washington? Smells a bit like Tonkin in Damascus?

One final note: News organizations and websites that have uncritically reported the atrocity stories from these “human rights” groups have helped set the stage for military action against Syria, and have been in fact part of the psychological preparation of the battlefield. As such, they should be considered as morally culpable for the disaster that will soon unfold for the Syrians and for us as the John McCains and the Hillary Clintons and the Sean Hannities and the Bill Kristols of the world.

violence incidents in their American families.

The ministry also condemned as “too mild” the prison sentence given to an American woman charged with brutally abusing her adopted Russian daughter. Theresa McNulty was sentenced to 23 months in prison with possibility of release within 8 months. The girl was eventually hospitalized after suffering burns to ten percent of her body.

In 2010, a Tennessee woman put her adopted Russian son on a plane back to Moscow alone, saying she could no longer cope with his violent behavior.

The United States has the world’s most adoptive parents and Russia has long been one of its biggest providers. U. S. citizens have adopted nearly 50,000 Russian children since the early 1990s.

“Jewish rights” clash with American rights

This inventor/writer studied not only horseless carriage science but what drives a certain deviant sect.

By Henry Ford

The Dearborn Independent, 12 March 1921

It is well that the public should understand that the present study of the Jewish Question in the United States is not based upon religious differences. The religious element does not enter except when it is injected by the Jews themselves. And it is injected in three ways: First, in their allegation that any study of the Jews is “religious persecution”; second, by their own records of what their activities in the United States consist of; third, by the impression which is very misleading if not corrected, that the Jews are the Old Testament people of the Old Testament religion which is so highly regarded in the Christian world. The Jews are not the Old Testament people, and the Old Testament, their Bible, can be found among them only with difficulty. They are a Talmudical people who have preferred the volumes of rabbinical speculation to the words of their ancient Prophets.

The note of religion does not enter this discussion until the Jews place it there. In this series of articles we have set aside every non-Jewish statement on this question, and have accepted only that which proceeds from recognized Jewish sources. It has been more than a surprise, in studying the proceedings of the New York Kehillah and the American Jewish Committee and their affiliated organizations, as represented by their activities throughout the country, to learn how large a part of these activities have a religious bearing, as being directly and combatively anti-Christian.

Most intolerant dissemblers

That is to say, when the Jews set forth in the public charters and constitutions of their organizations that their only purpose is to “protect Jewish rights,” and when the public asks what are these “Jewish rights” which need protection in this free country, the answer can be found only in the actions which the Jews take to secure that “protection.” The actions interpret the words. And thus interpreted, “Jewish rights” seem to be summed up in the “right” to banish everything from their sight and hearing that even suggests Christianity or its Founder. It is just there, from the Jewish side, that religious intolerance makes its appearance.

What follows in the course of this article is nothing less nor more than a group of citations from Jewish records covering a number of years. It is given here partly as an answer to the charge that this series of articles is “religious persecution,” and partly to help interpret by official actions the official Jewish program in the United States.

An important factor is that previous to the formation of the Kehillah and the Jewish Committee, this sort of attack on the rights of Americans was sporadic, but since 1906 it has increased in number and insistence. Heretofore it has gone unheeded by the public as a whole because of our general tolerance in this country, but from this time forth the country will possess information that what it has been tolerating is intolerance itself. Under cover of the ideal of Liberty we have given certain people liberty to attack liberty. We ought at least to know when that is being done.

Look rapidly down the years and see one phase of that attack. It is the attack on Christianity.

That is rather a hard thing to set down in writing in this country, and it would not be set down did not the facts compel it. Jewish writers nowadays show a great deal of anxiety that non-Jews should follow certain Christian doctrines. “We gave you your Savior, and he told you to love your enemies; why don’t you love us?” is the implication with which their statements usually come.

However, here are a few items from the record: They are recorded according to the Jewish calendar (our modern calendar is “Christian,” and therefore taboo) but here both calendar dates shall be supplied.

5661 (A.D. 1899-1900) The Jews attempt to have the word “Christian” removed from the Bill of Rights of the State of Virginia.

5667 (A.D. 1906-1907) The Jews of Oklahoma petition the Constitutional Convention protesting that the acknowledgement of Christ in the new State constitution then being formulated would be repugnant to the Constitution of the United States.

5668 (A.D. 1907-1908) Widespread demand by the Jews during this year for the complete secularization of public institutions of this country, as a part of the demand of the Jews for their constitutional rights. – Supreme Court Justice Brewer’s statement that this is a Christian country widely controverted by Jewish rabbis and publications.

They forbid Christian prayer

5669 (A.D. 1908-1909) protests made to governor of Arkansas against “Christological expressions” employed by him in his Thanksgiving Day proclamation, 1908 – Professor Gotthard Deutsch protests against “Christological prayers” at the high school graduating exercises in Cincinnati.

5673 (A.D. 1912-1913) The alarming growth of the Jewish population in New York makes it necessary for business men advertising for clerks or secretaries, or housewives advertising for help, to specify where Jewish help was not desired, otherwise the flood of Jewish applicants was overwhelming. The expressions “Christian preferred,” or “Jews please do not apply” are used. This year the New York Kehillah takes the matter in hand stating that “these advertisements indicate an alarming growth of discrimination against Jews and it is remarkable that many firms which cater to the trade of Jews display this form of prejudice.”

5679 (A.D. 1918-1919) The American Jewish Committee took up the alleged discrimination against Jews by army contractors. Louis Marshall, president of the Committee, notified Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War, that advertisements had appeared calling for carpenters to work in government camps, and that the advertisements required the applicants to be Christians. Secretary Baker replied that he had made an order prohibiting contractors from making this discrimination. (On the whole, this special form of advertisement may appear rather stupid: how many Jewish carpenters are there? Not enough to discriminate against. But there were doubtless other reasons.)

Provost Marshall Crowder, in charge of the Selective Draft, had issued an order to all medical examiners, under direction of the Surgeon General, stating “The foreign-born, especially Jews, are more apt to malingering than the native born,” and Louis Marshall again telegraphed both the Provost Marshall and the Surgeon General demanding that “the further use of this form shall be at once discontinued; that every copy of it that has been issued should be recalled by telegram; and that proper explanations be made, so as to expunge from the archives of the United States the unwarranted stigma upon three millions of people.”

It was President Wilson, however, who eventually ordered the excision of this paragraph.

The United States Shipping Board sent an advertisement to the New York Times calling for a file clerk and stating that a “Christian” (by which is always meant a non-Jew) was preferred. The ad was not published as written; it was changed so that it requested applicants to state their religion and nationality. This last form would seem to be far more objectionable than the other. In the first instance the employer states fairly what he wants. In the second instance the applicant is compelled to divulge certain facts about himself in utter ignorance of the employer’s preference. In the first instance, only the two classes that can do business get together; in the second instance there is no clearness about the situation until much useless effort is undertaken. Why? Because the Kehillah demands it. And why does the Kehillah demand it? Because, while it is all right for a Jew to remember that he is a Jew, it is not all right for you to remember it.

Discrimination only for them

So Louis Marshall got into action again with the Shipping Board, this time with certain drastic demands. Strangely enough, the protest was lodged through Bainbridge Colby, who was Woodrow Wilson’s last Secretary of State. Mr. Marshall demanded: “Not because of any desire for inflicting punishment, but for the sake of example and the establishment of a necessary precedent, this offense should be followed by a dismissal from the public service of the offender, and the public should be informed of the reason.”

Attention is particularly called to the tone which Mr. Marshall adopts when addressing high American officials in the name of the Jewish Committee. It is not to be duplicated in the addresses of any other representatives of other nationalities or faiths.

Unfortunately for Mr. Marshall’s plan of punishment, the object of his wrath was found to be a woman, and she was not discharged, although the Jewish Committee got an apology from Charles M. Schwab.

The Federal Reserve Bank and Liberty Loan Committee also got it wrong when an advertisement was printed calling for a “Stenographer for the Liberty Loan Committee (Christian).” Protest was made to Benjamin Strong, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank and chairman of the Liberty Loan Committee, and the advertisement was withdrawn. But this was not enough. Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo was also drawn in to express his “reprobation for an unpatriotic act.”

An officer in the Quartermaster’s Department replied to a young woman who applied for the position of secretary to him that he preferred not to have Jews on his office staff. He was reprimanded upon the request of Mr. Marshall.

The Plattsburg Manual, published for officers in the United States officers’ training camps, contained the statement that “the ideal officer is a Christian gentleman.” Mr. Marshall at once made the standard protest against all “Christological manifestations,” and the Manual was changed to read, “the ideal officer is a courteous gentleman.”

Ultimate hypocrisy

5680 (A.D. 1919-1920) In this year the Kehillah was so successful in its New York campaign that it was possible for a Jewish advertiser in New York to say that he wanted Jewish help, but it was not possible for a non-Jewish advertiser to state his non-Jewish preference. This is a sidelight both on Jewish reasonableness and Jewish power.

One gathers that a few people are still hugging the delusion that there is no Jewish Question in the United States. But another glance down the records will show the most prejudiced person that there is such a Question. If space permitted, the few details added below could be matched by a sufficient number to overflow all the pages of this paper.

5668 (A.D. 1907-1908) Jews agitate in many cities against Bible reading, Christmas celebrations or carols. In Philadelphia, Cincinnati, St. Paul and New York the Jewish opposition to the carols is met with strong counter-movements.

Jewish rights on the romp

5669 (A.D. 1908-1909) Jewish Community at Tamaqua, Pennsylvania, defeats resolution providing daily Bible Reading in the schools. – Jews attempting same compulsion in New Jersey are met with decision that pupils may absent themselves from devotional exercises. – Jewish agitation in Louisiana stirs ministerial association to defend the right of the school to the Bible. – Local council of Jewish Women of Baltimore petitions school board to prohibit Christmas exercises. – On demand of Edwin Wolf, Jewish member, Philadelphia school board prohibits Christmas exercises. – Jews present bills asking that New York Hebrews be permitted to ply trades and businesses on Sunday. Interdenominational Ministers’ Conference takes official action and Rev. Dr. David J. Burrell, of the Marble Collegiate Church, states that the attempts of the Jews to undermine the sanctity of Sunday are ethically unjustified.

5670 (A.D. 1909-1910) On demand of Jews the school board of Bridgeport, Pennsylvania, votes to discontinue the recitation of the Lord’s Prayer in the schools. – In Kentucky State Senate, Jews defeat the Tichenor Bill making the Bible a book eligible for the schools.

5671 (A.D. 1910-1911) Jews oppose Bible reading and singing of hymns in Detroit schools. – New York State Federation of Labor opposes Jewish Bill to exempt Jews from prosecution for violating Sunday laws. (The workingman knows that it means a 7-day week for the Goy!) – New York Kehillah does two contradictory things; favors bill to permit Jews to do all kinds of business on Sunday, and pledges itself to cooperate in the strict enforcement of the Sunday laws.

Relentless drive to compel

5672 (A.D. 1911-1912) Upon the urgency of two Jews the Hartford, Connecticut, school board votes on the question of abolishing all religious exercises in the schools. The motion is lost by 5 to 4. – Jewish pupils in Passaic, New Jersey, school petition the board of education to eliminate the Bible and all Christian songs from the school. – At the request of a rabbi, three principals of Roxbury, Massachusetts, public schools agree to banish the Christmas tree and omit all references to the season in their schools. – Jewish pupils of Plainfield, New Jersey, petition the abolition of the Bible and Christian songs from the schools. – The Council of the University Settlement, at the request of the New York Kehillah and the Federation of Rumanian Jews adopts this resolution: “That in holiday celebrations held annually by the Kindergarten Association at the University Settlement every feature of any sectarian character, including Christmas trees, Christmas programs and Christmas songs, and so on, shall be eliminated.” – Philadelphia Kehillah demands that Jews be exempted from operation of the Sunday laws. – In the Outlook, Dr. Lyman Abbott advises an inquiring schoolmaster that he is under no moral obligation to admit Jews to his private school. – A Jewish delegate to the Ohio Constitutional Convention suggests that the constitution be made to forbid religious references in the schools. – Jewish merchants of Paterson, New Jersey, petition for exemption from the Sunday laws. – Board of education of Yonkers, New York, denies Jewish request to forbid singing of Christian songs in the schools.

5673 (A.D. 1912-1913) Annual Convention Independent Order of B’nai B’rith at Nashville, Tennessee, adopts resolution against reading the Bible and singing Christian songs in public schools. – Jews at Jackson, Tennessee, seek an injunction to prevent the reading of the Bible in city schools. — Jews of Nashville, Tennessee, petition board of education against Bible and Christian songs. — Richmond, Virginia, school board restores Bible reading in the schools. — Bill introduced into Pennsylvania legislature providing for Bible reading in schools and the discharge of teachers omitting to do so. Jewish rabbis protest against bill. Jewish Kehillah of Philadelphia sends telegram to governor urging him to veto bill. Governor approves bill. — Chicago board of education, scene of much Jewish agitation, approves recommendation of subcommittee to remove Christmas from the list of official holidays in public schools. — In response to demands of Jews the Revere, Massachusetts, school board consents to remove references to Jesus from Christmas exercises in public schools. This action, however, was rescinded at a special meeting. — California Jews appeal before Senate Committee on Public Morals to protest against a proposed Sunday law. — At Passaic, New Jersey, 29 Jewish members of the senior high school class walk out of class election, alleging “racial discrimination.” — At Atlantic City, New Jersey, during the national convention of the United States War Veterans, the proposal to restore the Cross as part of the insignia of chaplain was defeated by Jews.

5674 (A.D. 1913-1914)
This year the energies of the Jewish powers were concentrated on the task of preventing the United States from changing immigration laws in a manner to protect the country from undesirable aliens.

5675 (A.D. 1914-1915) Jewish rabbi demands of California State superintendent of public instruction that some verses appearing in school readers be eliminated. — New York Kehillah concerns itself with attempts to secure modification of the Sunday laws.

5676 (A.D. 1915-1916) This year occupied by opposition to various movements toward making the schools free to use the Bible, and in opposition to the Gary system. The Gary system receives a great deal of attention from the Jews this year.

5677 (A.D. 1916-1917) Jews are busy carrying out an immense campaign against the “literacy clause” of the immigration bill.

Compulsion to dominate

And so it goes on. The incidents quoted are typical, not occasional. They represent what is transpiring all the time in the United States as the Jews pursue their “rights.” There is no interference whatever with Jewish ways and manners. The Jew may use his own calendar, keep his own days, observe his own form of worship, live in his own ghetto, exist on a dietary principle all his own, slaughter his cattle in a manner of which no one who knows about it can approve — he can do all these things without molestation, without the slightest question of his right in them. But the non-Jew is now the “persecuted one.” He must do everything the way the Jew wants it done; if not, he is “infringing on Jewish rights.”

Less gullible goy

Americans are very sensitive about infringing on other people’s rights. The Jews might have gone on for a long time had they not overplayed their hand. What the people are now coming to see is that it is American rights that have been interfered with, and the interference has been made with the assistance of their own broad-mindedness. The Jews’ interference with the religion of the others, and the Jews’ determination to wipe out of public life every sign of the predominant Christian character of the United States, is the only active form of religious intolerance in the country today.

To control, not kill reverence

But there is still another phase of the matter. Not content with the fullest liberty to follow their own faith in peace and quietness, in a country where none dares make them afraid, the Jews declare — we read it in their activities — that every sight and sound of anything Christian is an invasion of their peace and quietness, and so they stamp it out wherever they can reach it through political means. To what lengths this spirit may run is shown in the prophecies of the Talmud, and in the “reforms” undertaken by the Bolsheviks of Russia and Austria.

But even that is not all; not content with their own liberty, not content with the “secularization,” which means the de-Christianization of all public institutions, the third step observable in Jewish activities is the actual exaltation of Judaism as a recognized and specially privileged system. The program is the now a familiar one wherever the Jewish Program is found: first, establishment; second, destruction of all that is non-Jewish or anti-Jewish; third, exaltation of Judaism in all its phases.

Put the Lord’s Prayer and certain Shakespeare plays out of the public schools; but put Jewish courts in the public buildings — that is the way it works. Secularization is preparatory to Judaization.

Shakespeare’s characterizations “on the money”

The New York Kehillah is an illustration of how it is all done, and the American Jewish Committee is an illustration of the type of men who do it.

Can’t get more two-faced

Now for illustrations of the third phase of the program of “defending Jewish rights.”

The year 5669 (A.D. 1908-1909) was marked by an effort to introduce the idea of the Jewish Sabbath into public business. Jews refused to sit as jurors in court, thus postponing cases. Boycotts were instituted in New York against merchants who opened on Saturday. That this campaign has borne fruit is known by all travelers in eastern cities who notice that even large department stores are closed on Saturday.

The year 5670 (A.D. 1909-1910) was dedicated apparently to the work of introducing the idea of Jewish national holidays into public life. This question lately rose in New York in a threatening way, but was withdrawn just before the breaking point. Only temporarily withdrawn, however. The feint revealed the identity and number of those who are still on guard against the complete Judaization of their city. — Jewish members of stock exchanges endeavored to have these institutions recognize Yom Kippur by closing; In Cleveland this was done. — The Council of Jewish Women appealed to the Civil Service Commission at Washington for recognition of Jewish holidays. — In Newark, New Jersey, the rabbis asked the night schools to discontinue Friday evening sessions, because the Jewish Sabbath begins at sundown on Friday.

Forever pushy

In 1911 an attempt to have Hebrew officially recognized was frustrated by Supreme Court Judge Goff who refused incorporation of “Agudath Achim Kahal Adath Jeshurun” on the ground that the title should be in English. — Chicago Jews have election date changed because the official date fell on the last day of the Passover.

In 1912-1913 a number of special recognitions of the Saturday Sabbath were obtained, including Jersey City, Bayonne, Hoboken, Union Hill. In the Ohio legislature the Jews defeated a bill fixing a certain Saturday as the date of a primary election.

In 1913-1914 the United States Bureau of Immigration granted the request of Simon Wolf, long-time Jewish lobbyist at Washington, that instructions be given the Immigration Commissioners that no Jews be deported on Jewish holidays. — The Women’s Party of Cook County, Illinois, passes resolutions against allowing Jewish teachers to draw full pay for absence during Jewish holidays. — In this year also the question of the Jews’ method of slaughtering animals — the Shehitah — was brought forward. The American Jewish Committee thought this question of sufficient importance to engage its full interest.

Rigidly unassimilable

This series of facts could also be pursued at length. Kosher food for the children of public schools because there were Jewish children in the schools; protest against the Daylight Saving Ordinances because they were prejudicial to Jewish merchants who close their businesses on Saturday and open them after nightfall on that day. This is an illustration of the large number of small points at which Jewish life conflicts with community life. And, of course, each of these divergences is ground for an imperious “demand.” — Harvard University was severely criticized in 1917-1918 for refusing to set aside an entrance examination date that conflicted with a Jewish holiday. Since that time, however, eastern universities have become more pliable. But the whole course of the Christian year would have to be changed and all the traditional seasonal customs of the country broken up if the Jews are to be given the full measure of “liberty” which they demand.

Of course, the work of the Kehillah is claimed to be “educational.” It certainly is that. The best educated members are those who come from the ghettos of Galatia where the Kehillah idea is fully understood and the Jewish community government exercises unrestricted sway.

Whatever other phase of education the Kehillah may be interested in, it certainly stresses most the education to separateness. The New York Times especially likes to emphasize this matter of “education.” It is a convenient description and somewhat aids the effort to minimize Kehillah’s importance when it is under scrutiny. Nevertheless in the New York Times an article appeared about the Kehillah in which Dr. S. Benderly, director of the Bureau of Education, is quoted as describing the objects of the education:

Delusions of grandeur

“The problem before us was to form a body of young Jews who should be on the one hand true Americans, a part of this Republic, with an intense interest in upbuilding American ideals; and yet, on the other hand, be also Jews in love with the best of their own ideals, and not anxious merely to merge with the rest and disappear among them. ”

“That problem confronts Orthodox and Reform Jews alike. It is not merely a religious but a civic problem. ”

That is separatism and exclusivism as an educational program, and its results cannot help being a cloud of difference such as this article has in part disclosed. The New York Kehillah, through its Bureau of Education, is giving “a purely religious training to 200,000 Jewish children,” the religious training being, of course, not what is generally understood by that term, but a training in ideas of racial superiority and separateness.

This difference is strikingly illustrated in Jewish fiction recently. To love a Christian maiden is sinful; this is the theme of all sorts of stories, sketches and editorials appearing these days. But James Gibbons Huneker, in a sketch extravagantly praised by Jewish critics, shows how deep this idea of separateness is when he makes Yaankely Ostrowicz say: “As a child I trembled at the sound of music and was taught to put my finger in my ears when profane music, Goy music, was played.” This is the root idea: All Gentile life and institutions are “profane.” It is the Jews’ unceasing consciousness of the Goy that constitutes the disease of Judaism, this century-long tradition of separateness.

Jews are not Semites

There is no such thing as anti-Semitism. There is, however, much anti-Goyism. In England, Germany, France, America, Russia, there is no anti-Arab sentiment of which anyone knows. None of the Semite peoples have been distinguished by the special dislike of any other people. There is no reason why anyone should dislike the Semites.

It is very strange, however, that the Semitic people should be a unit in disliking the Jews. Palestine, which still has only a handful of Jews, is peopled by Semites who so thoroughly dislike the Jews that serious complications are threatening the Zionistic advances being made there. This surely is not anti-Semitism. Semites are not against Semites. But they are at odds with Jews.

When Aryan and Semite are kept conscious through many centuries that the Jew is another race, and when it is known that neither Aryan nor Semite are touchy on the race question, what is the answer? Only this, that the whole substance of such a situation must be supplied by the Jews.

There is no such thing as anti-Semitism. There is only a very little and a very mild anti-Jewism. But a study of Jewish publications, books, pamphlets, declarations, constitutions and charters, as well as a study of organized Jewish action in this and other countries, indicates that there is a tremendous amount of anti-Goyism, or anti-Gentilism.

A closer look at this tribe

Not that it is anything to fear. It is, however, something to know. Knowledge is a good defense. The New York Kehillah, having as its executive committee the same committee which is also the ruling group of Jews known as District XII of the American Jewish Committee, is worth consideration, not only as an illustration of the interlaced organization which combines all classes of Jews in one group, but also as an illustration of what is meant by “Jewish rights.” It is worth remembering that every “demand” voiced in Washington before officials and committees, that every high personage that appears there on Jewish matters — the Louis Marshalls and the Wises, the Goldfogles, the Rosalskis, besides many others, like the Kahns and the Schiffs, who keep out of the committee limelight and away from the protesting parties — are all linked up, through this Jewish interest or that, with the main interest which is based on the Kehillah and expresses itself through District XII of the American Jewish Committee.

To be, or not to be

By Dr. William Pierce

American Dissident Voices Broadcast of April 29, 2000

In addition to the invasion of White farms by armed Black gangs and the murder of White farmers, the Black supporters of dictator Robert Mugabe have turned to a new terror tactic against Whites: the gang rape of White women.

Eleven days ago, on April 18, a Black gang burst into the home of a White family just outside Salisbury, now called “Harare.” They seized 28-year-old Brendan Jowett and repeatedly smashed him in the head and face with a brick, until he lost consciousness. They dragged his 25-year-old wife Tonia into a bedroom and gang-raped her. Then they found Tonia’s 18-year-old sister, Laura Wiggins, hiding in a cupboard.

They dragged her out and raped her repeatedly. Then the Blacks poured furniture polish, which they believed was fuel oil, over their victims and attempted to set them afire, first with matches and then with a burning log from the fireplace, but the furniture polish would not burn. Finally the Blacks stole everything they could carry away and fled. On the same day another White farmer and his wife had gasoline poured on them, but when the Blacks were ready to burn their victims they discovered that they had forgotten to bring matches. The farmer and his wife got away with a brutal beating and the wrecking and looting of their home. White Rhodesians should at least be thankful for the ineptitude of the Blacks.

In the face of the overwhelming numerical advantage held by the Blacks, Black ineptitude is not enough to save the Whites of Rhodesia from their enemies, unfortunately. As I reported last Saturday, on Tuesday of last week, a Black mob murdered Martin Olds on his farm near Bulawayo, Rhodesia’s second-largest city. The 43-year-old White farmer knew that Black mobs were operating in his area, and he had sent his wife Kathy and two children, 17-year-old Martine and 14-year-old Angus, to stay with friends in the city. Olds was a former member of the Grey Scouts, Rhodesia’s elite anti-terrorist unit, before his country surrendered itself to Black rule in 1979. His neighbors considered him completely fearless. Ten years ago, when a friend had been seized by a crocodile, Olds had leaped from his boat and wrestled the crocodile in order to free his friend.

Olds was alone on his 12,000-acre cattle farm when a mob of 70 armed Blacks attacked his farmhouse early Tuesday morning. He telephoned the police station, which was less than ten minutes away, but the Black police didn’t show up until five hours later, after he was dead and the attackers were gone. Olds defended himself with a shotgun and a hunting rifle, and he wounded several of his attackers. He himself was hit by several bullets, and the bone in one leg was shattered. He bandaged and splinted his leg and continued defending himself till losing consciousness. Then the Blacks swarmed over him and beat him to death with clubs.

Teddy’s tough talk

Theodore Roosevelt was America’s twenty-sixth president, youngest elected to that office and one of the best so elected. Roosevelt was never a “teddy bear.” Here was a man of numerous accomplishments, an author of thirty-five books and an enthusiastic man of the outdoors.

In 1968, his son, Archibald B. Roosevelt, compiled the book, Theodore Roosevelt on Race-Riots-Reds-Crime. Archibald combed through the twenty-four-volume Memorial Edition of The Works of Theodore Roosevelt. He selected from these extensive works many of his father’s opinions in order to publish his own book in which he cites volume and page number from the Memorial Edition.

We have Dr. Edward Fields to thank for reprinting this book, which is banned in Canada.

The reason for the Canadian “thought police” censoring this book will become clear simply by reading a few chapter titles and some of the subtitles.

There are a lot of outright hoaxes about public school funding perpetrated by the “mainstream” media. The number one fraud is their claim that majority Black public schools get less funding than majority White ones do. The second hoax builds around the first. The media will claim that Blacks do poorly because less money is spent on their schools.

In the past, CofCC.org has reported numerous studies that show the exact opposite is true. If Washington, DC, were a State, it would be the one with the highest per student public school funding, also the State with the blackest schools. However, despite scandalously-high spending per pupil, Washington, DC, public schools are described as “the worst performing in the industrialized world.”

All across the nation, vast amounts of White tax dollars are diverted from the White community to majority Black public schools. CofCC.org has reported studies from several States that show the average per pupil expenditure is greatest when the school is majority Black.

Nowhere in the country is the disparity greater than in Missouri. Majority Black public schools in St. Louis and Kansas City receive triple the funding as majority White public schools in the poor Ozark region. However, the poorer White children still greatly outperform the over-funded Black schools.

From the Cato Institute (1998)...

For decades critics of the public schools have been saying, “You can’t solve educational problems by throwing money at them.” The education establishment and its supporters have replied, “No one’s ever tried.” In Kansas City they did try. To improve the education of Black students and encourage desegregation, a federal judge invited the Kansas City, Missouri, School District to come up with a cost-is-no-object educational plan and ordered local and State taxpayers to find the money to pay for it.

Lethargic paradise

Kansas City spent as much as $11,700 per pupil – more money per pupil, on a cost of living adjusted basis, than any other of the 280 largest districts in the country. The money bought higher teachers’ salaries, 15 new schools, and such amenities as an Olympic-sized swimming pool with an underwater viewing room, television and animation studios, a robotics lab, a 25-acre wildlife sanctuary, a zoo, a model United Nations with simultaneous translation capability, and field trips to Mexico and Senegal. The student-teacher ratio was 12 or 13 to 1, the lowest of any major school district in the country.

The results were dismal. Test scores did not rise; the Black-White gap did not diminish; and there was less, not greater, integration.

The Kansas City experiment suggests that, indeed, educational problems can’t be solved by throwing money at them, that the structural problems of our current educational system are far more important than a lack of material resources, and that the focus on desegregation diverted attention from the real problem, low achievement.

Hungarian deportation: an objectivity lesson

For a lesson in objectivity, let’s compare this photograph of real Hungarians arriving at Auschwitz-Birkenau, and meeting real German officers, guards and kapos... with the sketch below it of a similar scene that was presented to the public by the Auschwitz Memorial Museum in Poland in January of this year.

They expect us to believe it was “taken from a unique sketchbook drawn around 1943 at the Birkenau camp by a prisoner who hid it in a bottle.” Further explanation is that “a former prisoner [unnamed] working as a watchman discovered the 32 sketches in a bottle near the death camp’s crematorium in 1947.” He found it in 1947? Yet it was only January 2012 that they published these drawings in a book they titled, The Sketchbook from Auschwitz? It includes 22 pages of drawings from this “unknown prisoner whose initials were apparently MM.”

Single leg for holohoax to stand on

Museum spokesman Pawel Sawicki told Spiegel Online (where more of the sketches can be seen), “These sketches are the only work of art made in Birkenau that depict exterminations.” Gee whiz, “work of art” must include photographs because there are none of those either! Are they subtly trying to equate drawings with photographs by this kind of wording? We must suspect they are.

The museum art historian Agnieszka Sieradzka wrote in the book, “You can clearly see that the author was determined to present the largest number of details. Badges of functionary prisoners, number plates of trucks, train cars on the ramp as well as block numbers are carefully depicted.” Sure, “the artist” was copying all the photos that were available, but adding “his” own extra details – such as the rifles held by all the soldiers, which are not in the above photograph. There are no kapos or prisoner-workers in striped clothing in the drawing, only SS men. The new arrivals are all wearing Star of David badges, of which we do not see a single one in the photograph. They are dressed like well-to-do city folk in suits and hats, whereas the photograph shows the women’s heads covered with “babushkas” (scarfs) and the men in caps or the Orthodox black hats.

Weaseling out endless cash

In the photograph those arrivees are talking to the soldiers without fear while the sketch shows only soldiers, with their SS lapels carefully detailed, pointing guns or shouting orders. In other words, the sketch might show the details of the train, the towers, the uniforms – but not the true way the people looked and dressed, nor how they were treated. That last part is all comic-type fantasy taken from fictional books like Elie Wiesel’s Night. There is even a drawing of a “crematorium building” showing red-colored fire and heavy smoke coming out of the double chimneys! We know no one actually saw that. The no-doubt-modern-day-artist had a field day dreaming up as much anti-German meanness and Jewish humiliation as “he” could.

We are told that this publication

Memorial Museum has become a big money-maker for the State of Poland via tourism, and secures substantial employment for Poles far beyond jobs as tour guides and grounds-keepers. Poland has become more aggressive, therefore, in upgrading their lucrative tourist attraction and eagerly works with European and American Jews and Israel to keep Auschwitz a going concern far into the future.

United Kingdom honors its tradition of waging wars

Those City of London banksters were prior to the American crop.

presstv.ir

Britain insists on honoring its long-standing tradition of waging wars on other nations despite calls from the British public who have expressed their opposition to more foreign military interventions.

Recent reports have revealed British troops playing a leading role in armed terror gangs’ bloody battle against Syrian civilians and the Syrian army forces.

An intelligence report, published by the Israeli website Debka-file, which is known for its links with intelligence sources, revealed that British forces have been supplying armed terror gangs in the Syrian city of Homs with arms, logistics and intelligence.

This comes as the majority of British people have voiced their opposition to Britain’s military intervention in Syria and the British government’s subversive plots for the future of Syria.

A recent YouGov poll showed that 66% of the British people were against sending U. K. allied troops to Syria while only 9% supported such action.

Moreover, 55% of the respondents said they were against providing arms to Syria’s West-backed rebels while only 16% said they were in favor of the idea.

The results came as Britain started to draw up new plots to topple the government of the Syrian President Bashar al-Assad after the Western-Arab draft resolution at the United Nations Security Council failed after being vetoed by Russia and China.

British foreign secretary William Hague called for Britain’s contact with Syria’s rebels to be intensified and British Prime Minister David Cameron chaired a meeting of the National Security Council.

Prior to the meeting, Hague briefed cabinet ministers on the possible plots set for the future of Syria and speculations went viral that the British government would supply Syria’s terror gangs with arms, intelligence and direct tactical support.

The speculations were followed by an update that Britain’s intelligence agency, MI6, has established four operation centers in Homs as troops on the ground open the way for Turkey to carry out a secret military incursion into Syria.

Furthermore, the Daily Mail revealed that the U. K. government plans to supply Syria’s armed rebels with communications equipment so that they would be able to carry out ambush attacks against Syrian army forces.

Sic semper tyrannis

(Especially in the Fertile Crescent)

Anti-Semitic, Ashkenazi “Jews” from East Europe not only occupy Palestine but even send their U. S. Congressmunchkins bombing all Semitic nations into surrendering. Let’s review the TRUE history (for a change) of Israel’s next target, as recounted in the 1942 Edition of Compton’s Pictured Encyclopedia:

SYRIA. Though the name Syria today [1942] is commonly restricted to the part of Turkey which was put under French mandate in 1920, in the wider geographical and historical sense it includes Palestine as well. This ancient Syria is the narrow strip of land extending along the western edge of the Arabian peninsula, as far north as the Taurus Mountains, with the Mediterranean on one side and the desert on the other. Syria forms a bridge between Africa and Asia, between two ancient homes of civilization, the valleys of the Nile and the Euphrates. So, too, it is a link between East and West, a great highway of civilization, a battle-ground between empires.

Look at Syria in another way and you see it as the western wing of the semi-circle of fertile land which fringes the Arabian desert, extending from the southeast corner of the Mediterranean to the Persian Gulf—the region which has come to be known as the Fertile Crescent. There are many dry places even in Syria, but to the Canaanites and other tribes that drifted into it from the desert it was a garden land. Within it are contained the rich valleys of the Lebanon Mountain region, where the Phoenicians made their home; the verdant Plain of Esdraelon, in Palestine, the land of the Israelites; and the fertile Plain of Sharon to the southeast, which was the country of the

Washington’s Farewell Address:

1796 – “Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence (I conjure you to believe me, fellow-citizens) the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake, since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of republican government. But that jealousy to be useful must be impartial; else it becomes the instrument of the very influence to be avoided, instead of a defense against it. Excessive partiality for one foreign nation and excessive dislike of another cause those whom they actuate to see danger only on one side, and serve to veil and even second the arts of influence on the other. Real patriots who may resist the intrigues of the favorite are liable to become suspected and odious, while its tools and dupes usurp the applause and confidence of the people, to surrender their interests.”

ancient Philistines. Northern Syria was the abode of the Arameans, who were in very ancient times the merchants and traders of the Eastern world. Their widespread trade connections carried their language, the Aramaic, far and wide until it became the common business tongue of the entire Fertile Crescent. In time it even displaced its sister tongue, the Hebrew of Palestine, and thus became the speech of Jesus and the Jewish people of his time in Palestine.

Except for the Hittites and the Philistines, who became merged with the other peoples, these tribes which made up the population of Syria in ancient times were Semites. And although Greeks, Romans, Turks, Kurds, and European crusaders have blended with the original stock, the Syrians of today are still mainly Semitic and the language of the country is Arabic, a Semitic language which is related to the ancient Hebrew.

In spite of this racial kinship, however, these various tribes have never united to form a strong nation. This is due, doubtless, in part to their natural character, and in part to the fact that Syria is broken up by desert

Why not bomb those towelheads in Iran like we did Iraq?

By Kevin Barrett

TruthJihad.com

Most Americans who oppose the neocon-Zionist push for war on Iran just don’t like the Iranian form of government... mainly because they don’t understand it.

The Islamic Republic of Iran is called a democracy by some, a theocracy by others. In fact, it is both.

It is democratic in two senses. First, it has competitive and relatively honest elections for all relevant national, regional and local offices. In this sense its degree of democracy is somewhere between Europe, where elections are generally legitimate, and the U.S.A, where black-box voting machines and propaganda specialists decide outcomes and voters are almost entirely irrelevant.

Conspirators unwelcome

Some argue that Iran is undemocratic because certain opposition parties are not given free reign. This is true to the extent that those parties are not cats-paws of powerful foreign forces trying to undermine Iran. But the unfortunate reality is that Iran has faced a non-stop terrorist onslaught from the U. S. and Israel since its 1979 revolution. Its republican form of government could not survive if foreign-supported entities were to participate in power. Just as Fidel Castro and Hugo Chavez have every right to repress those who participate in U. S. attempts to subvert their nations, so too Iran has the same basic right of self-defense against vastly more powerful, heavily-armed, and unscrupulous adversaries.

Iran is democratic in a second sense: Its theocratic elements are supported by a strong majority of the population.

and mountain into a number of petty provinces, but most of all to the fact that Syria, placed between strong rival powers, was forced to play the part of a buffer State, subject to alien rule.

Syria is the home of many religions and sects. The Mohammedans are in the majority, although there are also great numbers of Christians and Jews. Among the many strange sects are the Mohammedan Druses, noted for their hatred of the Christian sect called the Maronites, numbering about 300,000 and under the jurisdiction of the pope, but with many special observances and privileges.

After having passed through the hands of the Assyrians, the Babylonians, the Persians, the Macedonians under Alexander the Great, and the Romans, Syria was conquered in the 7th century AD by the Arabs. In 1099 the Crusaders established the kingdom of Jerusalem and the principality of Antioch, but they were driven out in the latter part of the 12th century by Saladin, sultan of Egypt. In 1516 Syria was conquered by the Ottoman Turks, who remained in possession until expelled by British troops during the World War of 1914-18. At the peace conference the Arab claim was overruled and the mandate for Syria, exclusive of Palestine, was given to France.

For a few years the French, in spite of Syrian national aspirations and Turkish attempts to regain control in the north, made progress in setting up an administration similar to that maintained in Africa. The attempt of Emir Faisal to set up a Syrian monarchy was defeated (1919-20), banditry was suppressed, and Turkey, after a year of fighting, was placated by the Treaty of Angora (Oct. 20, 1921), which gave her a strip along the northern edge, including the Bagdad railway from a point near Aleppo eastward. In 1921 General Gouraud, the French High Commissioner, also set up

This is the political lesson of Christianity. Jesus, the prophet, the real “King of the Jews,” was the one worthy of attention and obedience. The corrupt religious and political authorities were (as they always have been) worthless scum. According to Jesus, it was time to implement “The Kingdom of Heaven”: rule by the good, rule by the godly, rule by those closest to God... ultimately, rule by God alone.

Two forces at work

This is also the political lesson of the birth of Islam. Mecca had become a complex society, and corrupt lovers of power and wealth—the Quraysh—reigned. Another prophet—Muhammad—appeared, with the Qur’an as a “furqan” or criterion dividing good from evil. After more than a decade of ruthless persecution, the forces of the good took up arms and vanquished the forces of evil... temporarily.

Within a few generations, Qurayshi greed-heads had re-established their misrule. This story, told beautifully in Barnaby Rogerson’s The Heirs of the Prophet, autonomous limited governments in Lebanon and in the Jebel (meaning “mountain”) Druse district southeast of Damascus, and made progress in developing roads, motor caravans, and industry. This policy was continued by General Weygand in 1924, and although Syrian charges of oppression and governmental extravagance continued, progress seemed steady until the appointment of General Sarraill as commissioner in 1925. Sarraill’s tactics stirred the Druses to revolt, and after some successes against French forces they moved on Damascus. After local riots there, Sarraill bombarded the Mohammedan quarter (October 18-20) with heavy loss of life. After his recall, peace was restored, though the struggle for independence continued.

Following the defeat of France in the second World War, there was large-scale German infiltration into Syria. Great Britain and “Free France,” to meet this threat, sent troops into Syria. After brief armed resistance, France in 1941 agreed to an armistice providing for allied occupation.

Even with the primitive agricultural methods still practised, Syria produces considerable crops of small grains, fruit, hemp, indigo, and tobacco. The horses are splendid creatures but the cattle of the region are small and insignificant.

Among the leading cities are Beirut, an important seaport, and the seat of a large American missionary college; Aleppo (Haleb), which is again becoming a great commercial center, as it was in ancient times; Antioch (Antakiyeh), noted as one of the chief centers of early Christianity; Jerusalem; and Damascus, the largest city and one of the most ancient cities in the world. The total population of Syria is over 3,000,000. (See also Palestine.)

reveals something that most Muslims have never adequately understood: The Shi’a may have been wrong about details, but they were right about the central issue.

The split between Sunni and Shia was ostensibly over the question of who should have succeeded the Prophet Muhammad as leader of the Muslim community. The Sunni argued for leadership by consensus, and selected Abu Bakr, Umar, and Uthman before Ali, while the Shia argued for inherited succession and claimed Ali should have been the rightful successor in the first place.

In fact, both were right – and wrong.

The Sunni were right: Goodness is not inherited. But they were wrong in their choice of leaders; they chose the worldly and the popular, rather than the most righteous and spiritually-advanced.

The Shia were wrong: Goodness is not inherited. But they were right in their insistence that Ali was the best, and should have been chosen as leader. And they were right that the martyrdom of Ali’s son Hussain at Karbala was an epic tragedy that marked the end of rule-by-the-righteous, and the reinstatement of Quraishi rule-by-the-evil.

Today, the Islamic Republic of Iran carries on, however imperfectly, the Islamic (and universally human) ideal of rule by the righteous and spiritually-advanced. President Ahmadinejad is said to have no interest in worldly wealth; he even sleeps on the floor. And those chosen as Supreme Leader by their fellow religious scholars are likely to be individuals of notable piety, to say the least.

Yes, there is terrible corruption in Iran, as everywhere. And yes, sometimes the good has to be ruthless in suppression of evil, especially when it is surrounded by immense powers of evil that seek to consume it and establish a one-world Satanic dictatorship over the planet.

Libya one year later and what have we got?

By Patrick Martin
uruknet.info

A report from Amnesty International details widespread torture in the prisons and makeshift detention facilities in Libya, under the regime established by the U. S.-NATO war that overthrew and murdered Colonel Muammar Gaddafi. In at least 12 cases, prisoners were tortured to death, the group found.

Amnesty delegates interviewed detainees and torture victims throughout January and early February, with the details released February 15.

Spreading “democracy”?

The savage practices documented by Amnesty investigators include beatings with whips, cables, metal chains and wooden sticks, electric shocks, extraction of fingernails, and rape. Militia fighters conducted these attacks brazenly, in some cases continuing to abuse prisoners while human rights advocates were present.

According to the Amnesty report, the National Transitional Council, installed by the imperialist powers, has not conducted a single investigation into the torture and abuse of prisoners, and the militias have uncontested authority to do as they please. No one has been arrested or prosecuted for war crimes except those who were on the losing side in the civil war, fighting for the ousted regime of Gaddafi.

The report declares, “The failure of the authorities to even begin to investigate with a view to bringing to justice former anti-Gaddafi fighters responsible for war crimes during the conflict and human rights abuses has perpetuated the climate of impunity for such crimes.”

The report makes clear the motivation for the violent repression: “Militias took captive thousands of suspected al-Gaddafi loyalists, soldiers and alleged foreign ‘mercenaries,’ many of whom were tortured or ill-treated in custody, in some cases leading to death. Scores of suspected al-Gaddafi loyalists were unlawfully killed following capture, among them the ousted Libyan leader himself and one of his sons. Militias also looted and burned homes and carried out revenge attacks against alleged al-Gaddafi supporters, forcibly displacing tens of thousands of people.”

Since the overthrow of Gaddafi, the militias continue to operate without any restraint, seizing people and holding them in secret detention centers, “without trial or any means to challenge the legality of their detention.” Detainees were not given access to lawyers and in most cases the “judicial” authority was actually the prosecution.

Amnesty delegates interviewed scores of torture victims who had been imprisoned in Tripoli, Benghazi, al-Zawiya, Gharyan, Misrata and Sirte, as well as families of those who died in custody after being tortured. Visible wounds and injuries, as well as medical reports, confirmed the testimony about torture. In many cases, victims were too afraid to tell their stories even when they showed their wounds.

Exporting Guantanamo

Some 2,400 detainees are acknowledged at prisons controlled by the NTC, but many thousands more are held by the official Libyan military and by police and militia units operating entirely outside of any legal structure. Arrests continue unabated, despite a series of reports since the beginning of this year by Doctors Without Borders, Human Rights Watch and now Amnesty.

This well-documented brutality and murder is grounds for indicting on war crimes charges not only the NTC leaders but their imperialist masters – President Obama, British Prime Minister David Cameron, French President Nicolas Sarkozy and the rest of the NATO gangsters who bombed Libya mercilessly for eight months and armed and organized the “rebel” forces under the leadership of mercenaries and agents of the right-wing oil sheikdoms of the Persian Gulf.

Media-approved tyranny

It also exposes the criminal character of support for the U. S.-NATO intervention in Libya by middle-class “left” organizations in the United States and Europe, who enthusiastically embraced the “human rights” pretext offered by the Obama administration and its NATO partners.

These political charlatans claimed that only an intervention by the Western powers could prevent an imminent bloodbath in Benghazi. They glossed over the real motive for the war: Libya’s vast oil wealth, now being handed over to the major oil companies. And they are now silent over the mounting toll of death, torture and wrongful imprisonment being meted out by a regime established by the imperialist “liberators.”

The chapter headings in the Amnesty report suggest the scope of the repression: Detentions Outside Legal Framework; Torture and Other Ill-Treatment; Deaths in Custody; Revenge Attacks and Forcible Displacement; Continuing Scourge of Impunity.

The bulk of the report consists of grisly eyewitness testimony from torture victims, who are given letter designations rather than named, in order to protect them against likely retaliation from the militias. A few examples suffice:

A 29-year-old former soldier:

“... they forced me to lie on my back on a bed and my hands and legs were tied to the frame. In this position I was beaten with fists on my face. Then they beat me with a plastic hose on my feet. Later, I had to turn around face-down and was tied again to the bed. In that position, I was beaten again with a hose on my back and on the head. I was also subjected to electric shocks to various parts of my body including my left arm and chest. The instrument they used was a black stick about 50 cm long. My cousin was also subjected to electric shocks.”

A 25-year-old computer programmer from a family identified as pro-Gaddafi:

“They started beating me on the way to the detention center. They also used swear words. At the detention center I was suspended from the iron bars of a gate and was beaten with a stick and a cable. This lasted for some hours. Afterwards I was taken to another room for interrogation where they gave me electric shocks. They tied my legs while I was lying on the floor on my back. Two live wires were connected to the toes of my feet. I believe they used the electric current from the socket. They gave me electric shocks six or seven times. Then I was taken to a separate room where I stayed for three days.”

American-imposed sadism

A 26-year-old cigarette seller, detained in Sirte, Gaddafi’s home town, and then taken to Misrata for interrogation:

“One person took a glass bottle and hit my head. Then they forced me to sit on the floor and tied my hands to the back. They kicked my head. They beat me all over my body with a hose, with a wooden stick and with a cable used for cars. They wanted information about people I do not know.”

What an outrage. FOX has axed Judge Andrew Napolitano’s show, and not for ratings reasons. But as much as we will all miss the greatest news and commentary show ever to appear on TV – this cretinous cancellation punishes the large audience most – there are more important things ahead for the Judge, and rightly so. In the meantime, read his books.

Constitutional Chaos: What Happens When the Government Breaks Its Own Laws

In this incisive and insightful book, Judge Andrew P. Napolitano peels back the legal veneer and shows how politicians, judges, prosecutors, and bureaucrats are trampling the U. S. Constitution in the name of law and order and fighting terrorism. Napolitano reveals how they:

- silence the First Amendment
- shoot holes in the Second
- break some laws to enforce others
- entrap citizens
- steal private property
- seize evidence without warrant
- imprison without charge
- kill without cause

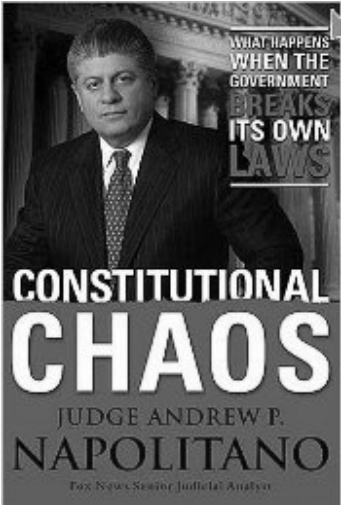

Pundits on the right, left and center have praised Constitutional Chaos for its penetrating examination of our rights and liberties in the post-9/11 world.

will it tell?
Throughout our history, the federal government has lied to send our children off to war, lied to take our money, lied to steal our property, lied to gain our trust, and lied to enhance its power over us. Not only does the government lie to us, we lie to ourselves. We won’t admit that each time we let the government get away with misleading us, we are allowing it to increase in size and power and decrease our personal liberty.

In acquiescing to the government’s continuous fraudulent behavior, we bear partial responsibility for the erosion of our individual liberties and the ever-expanding federal regulation of private behavior. This book attacks the culture in government that facilitates lying, and it challenges readers to recognize that culture, to confront it, and to be rid of it.

Manning nominated for Nobel Peace Prize

On February 1, 2012, the Icelandic Parliament nominated Private Bradley Manning for the Nobel Peace Prize by communicating the following to the committee in explanation of why Manning deserves this recognition for his important individual efforts to impact peace in our world.

Bradley Manning

Letter to the Nobel Peace Prize Committee:

We have the great honor of nominating Private First Class Bradley Manning for the 2012 Nobel Peace Prize. Manning is a soldier in the United States Army who stands accused of releasing hundreds of thousands of documents to the whistleblower website WikiLeaks. The leaked documents pointed to a long history of corruption, war crimes and imperialism by the United States government in international dealings. These revelations have fueled democratic uprising around the world, including a democratic revolution in Tunisia. According to journalists, his alleged actions helped motivate the democratic Arab Spring movements, shed light on secret corporate influence on our foreign policies, and most recently contributed to the Obama Administration agreeing to withdraw all U. S. troops from the occupation in Iraq.

Bradley Manning has been incarcerated for well over a year by the U. S. government without a trial. He spent over ten months of that time period in solitary confinement, conditions which experts worldwide have criticized as torturous. Juan Mendez, the United Nations’ Special Rapporteur on Torture and Cruel, Inhuman and Degrading Treatment or Punishment, has repeatedly requested and been denied a private meeting with Manning to assess his conditions.

Important disclosures

The documents made public by WikiLeaks should never have been kept from public scrutiny. The revelations – including video documentation of an incident in which American soldiers gunned down Reuters journalists in Iraq – have helped to fuel a worldwide discussion about America’s overseas engagements, civilian casualties of war, imperialistic manipulations and rules of engagement. Citizens worldwide owe a great debt to the WikiLeaks whistleblower for shedding light on these issues, and so I urge the Committee to award this prestigious prize to accused whistleblower Bradley Manning.

Sincerely,
Birgitta Jónsdóttir

Force-feeding the “Israel Firsters”

Jesus Christ was illegitimate, a liar, a fool, a conjurer, a seducer, was crucified and buried in hell while his followers (Christians) are unclean idolaters. If you have never heard of this religious dogma, it means you are not familiar with the edicts of the Jewish Talmud.

We can thank a courageous Catholic priest for interpreting some of the anti-Christian and anti-Gentile passages documented within the Talmud which is the source or bible containing the occult Jewish belief system with its interpretations and Talmudic laws.

In 1892, Reverend Iustinus Bonaventura Pranaitis (1861-1917) translated a number of Hebrew passages from Talmudic sources into Latin. Reverend Pranaitis was a Lithuanian Catholic Priest, a Master of Theology and a Professor of the Hebrew language at the Imperial Ecclesiastical Academy of the Roman Catholic Church in St. Petersburg, Russia.

By the author on Pages 65 and 66 of the Epilogue: “In this work I have quoted from only a very few of the Talmudic books which refer to the Christians. For the sake of brevity, and to spare your sensitive soul, I omitted many others which could have been included. These texts, however, which I have quoted should be sufficient to demonstrate how false are the statements of the Jews when they claim that there is nothing in the Talmud which teaches hatred and enmity for Christians.

“I realize, however, that, since the truth does not please everyone, there are many who will become my enemies for thus having borne witness to the truth. And I have been reminded of this, both by the laws of the Talmud itself which threatens death to ‘traitors,’ and more so, by the warnings of those who have had experience of the actions which Jews take against those who make known things which are not favorable to them. They all foretold that I would perish at the hands of the Jews. In trying to prevent me from going ahead with my work, some begged me to remember the fate of Professor Charini, who was suddenly killed after he had undertaken to translate the Talmud into the vernacular. Others reminded me of the fate of the monk Didacus of Vilna, a convert from Judaism, who was cruelly murdered; others of those who had been persecuted for having revealed secrets of the Jewish religion. Still others warned me of the danger to those dear to me. ‘Wszak ciebie sydzi zabija’ (But the Jews will kill you) was repeated to me hundreds of times.”

Talmud keeps its promise

Reverend Pranaitis wrote his work in both Hebrew and Latin. It was translated into a number of different languages. Colonel E. N. Sanctuary, an anti-war activist during the Second World War, translated the book into English as, The Talmud Unmasked, the Secret Rabbinical Teachings Concerning Christians. Here are his notes from Page 6: “This is an accurate translation of Father Pranaitis’ Latin text, and it is felt that it will be appreciated by those who are interested to know what this great scholar wrote

Chutzpah, thy name is Silverstein!

If you thought Andrew “assassinate Obama for Israel” Adler was the last word in chutzpah...think again. This Jew wants more billions for destroying the WTC! Larry “blow up the World Trade Center for Israel” Silverstein is light years beyond Adler.

Larry Silverstein, you may recall, is a reputed mobster who allegedly got his start in the sex services business and then oozed into real estate. Two months before 9/11, Silverstein finalized his 100-year-lease on the white elephant, condemned-for-asbestos World Trade Center complex and proceeded to double the insurance, hardballing insurers into changing the policy to “cash payout.”

On 9/11/01, Silverstein skipped his usual breakfast at the top of the North Tower. He says his wife reminded him of an appointment with his dermatologist. Other family members also stayed away, with other excuses. All who breakfasted there died. Silverstein and family survived.

After confessing on national television to blowing up World Trade Center 7, Silverstein went to court, asked for – and received – double indemnity, including almost a billion dollars for WTC-7 – the very building he had confessed to blowing up. Larry had the chutzpah to claim there were two separate, unrelated terrorist attacks (the two planes) so he should get twice the money. Somehow that worked, presumably thanks to a mobbed-up judge. “Lucky Larry” walked away with more than five billion dollars, plus rights to rebuild.

Insatiable appetite

But that wasn’t enough chutzpah for Larry. For the past several years he’s been back in court, asking for 11 billion dollars from the airlines’ insurers. Now Silverstein has somehow convinced AMR, the parent company of American Airlines, to give him a special dispensation. Even though AMR

“COUNTERING OFFICIAL Zionist historiography, Sand questions whether the Jewish People ever existed as a national group with a common origin in the Land of Israel/Palestine. He concludes that the Jews should be seen as a religious community comprising a mishmash of individuals and groups that had converted to the ancient monotheistic religion but do not have any historical right to establish an independent Jewish State in the Holy Land. In short, the Jewish People, according to Sand, are not really a “people” in the sense of having a common ethnic origin and national heritage. They certainly do not have a political claim over the territory that today constitutes Israel and the occupied Palestinian territories, including Jerusalem.” – Leon T. Hadar on this important subject from original Talmudic sources. Father Pranaitis was one of those ‘liquidated’ by the Cheka during the Bolshevik revolution in Russia.”

But his translations survived

From Page 35: “In the preceding chapter we saw what the Jews think of the Founder of the Christian religion, and how much they despise his name. This being so, it would not be expected that they would have any better opinion about those who follow Jesus the Nazarene. In fact, nothing more abominable can be imagined than what they have to say about Christians. They say that they are idolaters, the worst kind of people, much worse than the Turks, murderers, fornicators, impure animals, like dirt, unworthy to be called men, beasts in human form, worthy of the name of beasts, cows, asses, pigs, dogs, worse than dogs; that they propagate after the manner of beasts, that they have a diabolic origin, that their souls come from the devil and return to the devil in hell after death; and that even the body of a dead Christian is nothing different from that of an animal.”

From Page 38... “In Midrasch Talpioth (fol. 225d) it says: ‘God created them in the form of men for the glory of Israel. But Akum (Christians) were created for the sole end of ministering unto them (the Jews) day and night. Nor can they ever be relieved from this service. It is becoming to the son of a king (an Israelite) that animals in their natural form, and animals in the form of human beings should minister unto him.”

From Page 41: “Nor must Christians be avoided for seven days after they have buried someone, as the law of Moses commands, since they are not men; for the burial of an animal does not pollute one.”

According to the various sources translated by Reverend Pranaitis, Christians are to be avoided, deceived, lied to, left to die or murdered in order to rid the land of these heretics and idolaters who follow Christ’s teachings.

Reverend Pranaitis: “What Christians have thought of the Talmud is amply proved by the many edicts and decrees issued about it, by which the supreme rulers in Church and State proscribed it many times and condemned this sacred Secondary Law Code of the Jews to the flames.”

has filed bankruptcy, which theoretically should stop all lawsuits against it, the company’s attorneys have – for unstated reasons – chosen to insert a special rider into their bankruptcy agreement allowing Silverstein to continue suing the company.

According to the Wall Street Journal: “Silverstein’s company, which leased the Twin Towers and two other World Trade Center buildings from the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, is seeking billions of dollars in damages for alleged negligence by the airline, according to the lawsuit. It is also seeking compensation for the lost rental income; the developer had signed 99-year leases for the space just two months before the attack.”

Lost rental income?! Larry, those Towers were condemned for asbestos! Not only that, they had a very high vacancy rate and antiquated communications infrastructure. New York City had desperately sought a way to demolish the Towers for at least a decade, but could not do so because of the asbestos. The WTC complex, a gigantic money-loser for the City, would quickly have bankrupted any private owner...had not a certain act of urban renewal by other means taken place on 9/11/01.

The o-so-friendly media

As if all that isn’t enough chutzpah, get this: Silverstein used his 9/11 insurance fraud money to buy Chicago’s Sears Tower! How could Lucky Larry possibly top all of his previous acts of over-the-top chutzpah?

Simple: He could blow up the Sears Tower, brag about it on national TV and collect still more double-digit billions in insurance money on the premise that it was somehow the fault of the Muslims.

After all, Lucky Larry is on a winning streak.

Will he roll the dice one more time?

ANOTHER IDEA

8½x11 double-sided flyers would be a good way to circulate your articles at truck stops and so forth, bringing inquiries about The First Freedom. Ask subscribers to make copies and help pass out such flyers; that will get more attention for the paper.

DISTRICT OF CORRUPTION

Please send me 100 pamphlets exposing the 14th non-Amendment. I’ve been aware of this fraud for over forty years and tried to inform the sheeple. Not much luck; they have their bread and games. Anything after the 10th I consider bogus. The cat’s been out of the bag for some time, but the rats still get my cheese.

SEPARATISTS

Prison personnel want to tar and feather me as an example to other White seekers of truth after a turncoat’s statement that I had said there was going to be a race war, that I tried to recruit him into the Aryan Nations. In my defense I made it clear that AN does not under any circumstances allow inmates membership. Recruit is what the U. S. Army does. They had earlier disciplined me for introducing another prisoner to the Church of Jesus Christ. Can you imagine that being a punishable offense? The official website now shows I’m in for life, though in Santa Rosa County my sentencing stated parole after 15 years, which were completed eight years ago and I’ve never even had a parole hearing.

Yorie Kahl is in an Indiana prison. A few years ago I wrote him regarding news that a retrial was possible. Having seen nothing more, I wrote him recently and the letter came back, “no forwarding address.” I got his mother’s phone number, and learned something that is really dumb! He was not moved; the prison’s P. O. box was changed. How stupid, that they couldn’t just put it in the new box. Talked with his mother Joan quite a while about the ambush of Gordon Kahl, his wife and son, also Scott Fall who is a prisoner in Wisconsin. Write Yorie at: Yorie Kahl 04565-059 USP

This newspaper, too, has difficulties keeping up with where they’ve relocated many inmate subscribers at any given moment; they’re completely loyal to the New World Order; anytime a White like Tony DuPree protests being caged with animals, they transfer him to where he’s the only one of his kind in the place. The fedstooges ambushed tax protester and separatist Gordon Kahl at a roadblock outside Medina, North Dakota, in 1983 and later murdered him in cold blood – rather than allow the public to hear his arguments.

FOR SHAME

I appreciate this acceptance, that I have an opportunity for a one-year subscription to The First Freedom. I am, as a student currently attending college, just starting to question the world around me. No one today cherishes knowledge. People would rather stay on their couches and talk about the Super Bowl propaganda. We live in a narrow-minded society.

Actually people do care for the truth; it’s just that the Jews have eclipsed it.

THE INTRUDER

In keeping with your recent articles about the use of television as a propaganda tool, I submit the following words from a song performed on Saturday Night Live by Frank Zappa 35 years ago. Paraphrasing:

“I’m the slime / I am gross and perverted / I’m obsessed and deranged / I have existed for years / But very little has changed.

“I’m a tool of the government / And industry too / I am destined to rule / And to regulate you.

“I am vile and pernicious / But you can’t look away / I make you think I’m delicious / With the things that I say.

“(Line forgotten) / Have you guessed me yet? / I’m the slime oozing out / Of your TV set.”

ROTTEN PRESIDENTIAL TIMBRE

Only those who put Israel first over America, promise to fight perpetual wars in the Middle East for Israel, flood Israel with billions in foreign aid and armaments and endorse Israel’s cruel suppression of Palestinian rights, can be elected to high office. The Jews also demand of Republican contenders liberal philosophies that pose as “conservative” while buying into Big Government and Fed policies. They frown upon the U. S. Constitution.

So the candidates are for that artificial American creation called “Israel,” would move the U. S. Embassy from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem; increase U. S. aid to Israel; bomb Iran for Israel; convert the Golan Heights of Syria and illegal settlements in the West Bank into parts of Israel.

These candidates say the United States is a “Judeo-Christian” nation. False! That’s an oxymoron, opposites linked together to confuse; in this case religions, one believing in Christ, the other Anti-Christ.

Gingrich claims the Palestinians have no right to Palestine and are an invented people. Just the opposite. The so-called Jews of today are not those of the Bible, nor a Semitic people. Their ancestors are the Khazars who migrated from southern Russia.

TARRIFFS NEEDED

There is only one proposition that can save the U. S. economy at this time. To restore our industry and agriculture, we must impose a heavy import tax on all products coming into our country. That revenue made our country great for 200 years. Forget about free trade, a false religion which has destroyed employment and the housing industry. Abolish the Federal Reserve, the income tax, get out of the U. N. and bring our troops home.

I told this to my U. S. representative, and he told me: “God bless you.”

I’m in your debt for the Henry Ford series of articles from his paper, the Dearborn Independent, 1921. I read his words with my mouth agape. He spelled it out for the world but the people ignored the danger, did nothing to protect themselves nor stop the Jew from taking complete control of their country. Gentile America has not changed one bit; as their blindness and cowardice was inexcusable in 1921, so is it today. The information is out there thanks to the internet and The First Freedom.

Only in this newspaper can I read an article such as “Without accountability, no lessons learned,” by Chris Floyd (Jan. 2012, page 6) where he sums up the sociopathic state of American society in a heart-rending way. He spoke my soul.

PLACE YOUR BETS

I’m not a gambling man, but if I were I’d pick March 8, 2012, for the date of the Israeli attack on Iran. Why? Because March 8 is the 47th anniversary of President Lyndon B. Johnson’s dispatch of the U. S. Marines into Vietnam. March 8 is also the Feast of Purim this year, just as it was nine years ago in 2003 when that little Texas Jew George W. Bush launched his “Shock and Awe” blitzkrieg against Iraq. We shall see...

OUR WAY

I’m glad, living in the woods at the end of a State road where we grow and can our own food, get fresh air and lots of exercise chainsawing and splitting wood to feed the stove. I stopped watching TV in January; too much hype, lies, etc., about Hollywood, politics and pro football. We’ll do fine as long as “they” leave us alone. But, with the law signed by B. O. on December 31, 2011, I wonder who’ll squeal on me for reading TFF, AFP, etc. MARLENE HASSELL

The longer view is shared by few

Most people do what’s expected of them and so are easily managed, like a corporate chicken farm’s Grade A Large egg layers. Some will say that’s stretching it, but the well-fed hen or slave fulfilling an assigned role has a good life. What could be more natural than this urge to accept one’s given place and cheerfully perform the job that Massa dictates?

If you’re hoping for anything more from life, think sacrifice early on. Rather than let various hoots consume all earnings as they arrive, invest each tenth part in the future. A truly self-governed person maturing into the world pays no rent beyond six months upon becoming profitably employed, and deals almost exclusively with his own type of people whom he understands and trusts.

Two opposing forces are always, even at the smallest awareness levels, battling for a rung up on one another. Each of us is but a pawn between them. While bottom-ranked grunts get conditioned to follow orders, the “decision-making” higher-ups find they’re also hardly at liberty to make a difference. From what?

The default mode

By pledging unreserved allegiance to any party or movement when holding back nothing, we waive our God-given heritage. Jingoism – “My country, right or wrong” – is a bit much, as the Roman republic finally discovered after electing one “temporary” dictator too many.

Let’s invoke that which supercedes our own judgment, to secure first the survival of what’s closest; and care less for distant cousins or the remote, law-shuffling State. It’s called Divine Guidance.

Well, yes, but some government, of this kind or that, will always be. If the senate couldn’t maintain order, wasn’t it time for an emperor?

The record shows that not even the most conscientious of such magnates exercised more authority than bluff. They, too, lifted themselves among the heavenly stars only nominally. Who then? No, what.

Force rules at two poles; one, attractive of all that is good and repulsive to the evil from which every self-governed individual draws apart – the other opposite, but by no means lacking allurements. Nearest those pivotal extremes, some few actually call the shots, such ones as many an indecisive soul must count on to learn his fate. It’s the default mode, an election of sorts whether by choice or decree. Force compels an evil George W. Bush to put it bluntly, “You’re either with or against us,” and discourages even those working the strings that move his lips from assuming they enjoy absolute control over him. So we get megalomania’s eternal reaching.

Because it is thus, we’ll not worry too much about our small numbers relative to the masses, but proceed toward recovering sufficient media and spelling the truth out. We must pray for their emancipation not only from blind obedience or anarchy on one hand, but self-indulgence at another extreme. That happiness chased by many, though few let it catch up, Horace calls the golden mean. Amid any storm or battle’s fury, a pacified soul knows neither anger, fear, hate nor regret when facing whatever situation. He’s inwardly at peace.

Awakening to reality

Every challenge God visits upon us is an opportunity for honing the rising worths of all competing arguments. Ours is that we cannot accept a so-called corporate shield from behind which Dubya and the Kenyan commit Massa’s war crimes with impunity. Following the Nuremberg precedents, they and their controllers must hang.

In fact, it’s about time we did away with a corporation’s limited liability altogether. Today’s treatises on artificial intelligence inveigh against possible robotic takeovers a mite late; flesh-and-blood humans have gone that route for centuries. Businessmen obtain a State-sanctioned charter for some new venture requiring investor capital and set up shop; partners then buy a controlling interest in that generic company in order to eventually loot its assets and dump their shares on unsuspecting newcomers. It’s the same Ponzi scheme whether you’re talking about a corporate farm or the government. We demand personal accountability.

All of these Dubyans and Africans, once understanding themselves actually bound within the U. S. Constitution’s enumerated powers and not free to just perfunctorily mouth their oaths of office, would fear that job and stick with the devils they know; an unlikely development, so where does that leave us now?

Most of our people aren’t ready for the pole reversal that’s coming; but it’s end of the line! Rome reached that terminus after having overrun all the known world before finding herself invaded. There is nothing new under the sun.

The Marines are looking for a few good, programable Aryans these days who, like coops of proud fighting gamecocks, would attack even defenseless civilians if ordered to do so. The more decisive souls, having increased their intellectual and physical maneuverability by ten percent right from the first, remain well-armed against what’s overdue. America was great because, said de Toqueville, “she is good.” That started changing when the Jews auctioned captive Africans, quickening with their subversion of the money, media and government, then went ballistic when they raised the rent on typical media flunkies, requiring them to absurdly blame the buyers of such chattel; which explains why these united States are laying an egg a day for “our” “temporary” expeditionary holotoastings to “end wars” and “spread democracy.”

The verdict

We are foreclosing on those foreclosers. Rome still lives in all her splendor; only the Empire and its Caesars have stopped doing business while brandishing a sword in the whole world’s face. Today the District of Corruption’s legions are vacating outposts one after another. And, even if our Statue of Liberty should get the Saddam Hussein treatment, that still leaves untainted such American endowments as steam power, an everyman’s T-Model Ford, the cotton gin, telegraph, incandescent light, telephone, radio, airplane, electronic computer, laser beam and space travel, to touch in passing only a few things our Aryan brothers gave the world before their beneficiaries began promoting this “dream” that anyone could soar like an Eagle Scout without the blood, sweat and tears our valiant sires sacrificed for all those achievements. In attempting to create talent like fiat currency, simply by printing diplomas, we get such “doctors” and “scientists” as turned higher education into lunacy and crashed the manned space program’s plans for colonizing the moon on our way to the planets. Accommodating “minority” racial quotas serves neither our interests nor theirs. Russian Premier Nikita Khrushchev, perhaps intuiting already the coming collapse of that ill-devised Soviet experiment, said it best: “You can’t make a silk purse out of a sow’s ear.”

Then there’s this even greater legacy of Christian morality, unfortunately spurned today by many, as is the U. S. Constitution along with our Founders’ warnings, though all of these will, like America’s majestic hills and plains, remain for countless ages after the necromancers and Neo-cons have snuffed out their brief candles.

Between these irreconcilable forces, on one hand Russia’s “Soviet Republics” and their seventy-five-year failures, elsewhere our American Boy Scouts acknowledging one’s duty as, “Be prepared; others aren’t obligated by your indecisiveness,” peoples worldwide wait to be “liberated” from the results of an indoctrinated superstition that has them in thrall: something-for-nothing communism.

Things never get boring. Both formerly-Jewish-financed parties wanting “change” from Czarist imperialism – the Bolsheviks (“majority”) and Mensheviks (“minority”) – kept the campaigning masses who had no idea what was behind their “spontaneous” revolution chasing and killing one another until too exhausted to get out from under all of those five-year Reconstruction plans that were hardening the boot heel pressed on their necks. Alabama knows its feel.

The Jewish mediacracy, mother of many unprepared starts toward the Jurassic Age without learning a thing, self-hypnotizes its adolescent brain into ever-new dreams. If the headstart program didn’t discover any Negro scientists, at least it sent White pride to the hintermost bus seats, a great leap for egalitarianism!

We are NOT the world

Agitating here are two equally-balanced coinages, a currency backed by clichés and those “federal” “reserve” notes purchasing sufficient media to determine the popular mindset. Rather than discuss how stateless banksters bought Congress or ridicule this oxymoronic new “Judeo-Christian” shtick, let’s review instead the endearingly absurd idea of America as a “proposition nation.”

Certainly our people have put forward more benefits to the world than all other races combined. But such verbs of action do not legitimize the lamestream media’s turning those heroic achievements into an adjective that somehow licenses its writers to first propose where Jewish Massa would take it from here and then dictate that path. Many an armchair warrior never having faced the horrors of what he’s advocating sits impatiently ready to drone-bomb every Mideast nation into a Jewish vassal State.

How we got where we are

Propaganda financed on both sides of the oceans by that tribe during seventy-five years of contrived Cold War had us fearing the Russians and themselves quarantined behind an iron curtain to ward off Western contamination. So who comes out as the most bamboozled people in today’s world? Let’s see, Israel is the “only democracy” in the Middle East, right? And every other State that once held America an exemplar of human progress now hates “our” federal government’s troglodytical bloodletting, as weaker States attempt to free themselves from a shrinking U. S. dollar’s dominance that’s taking their currencies down with it in this polar reversal. When Moscow beat all her neighbors into submission not long ago with an iron fist, we were the good guys. Now an ex-KGB secret police chief, having incarcerated or exiled most of the once-powerful Jewish criminal oligarchs, rules the Russian roost with a velvet glove while those same expatriates relocate their profitable warmongering conspiracy here.

My proposition is that we boycott these phony debates, “elections,” the fraudulent Fourteenth Amendment et seq – this whole failed “experiment” that today’s would-be rulers conjure up as their Project for a New American Century of War on Everything. Let’s order Alabama’s misrepresentatives to pick up their marbles and come home, for the real argument is between that evil spreading from the District of Corruption assisted by its corporate satellites, and such sovereignty as girds itself with merit alone.

In other words, because the principle for which we stand will automatically reassert itself fully upon our recovering the media along with debt-free money, this problem is not one of crushing evil out of existence – an impossibility, as every adult carries its germ – but rather that vigilance required of us when distancing such vulgarity from the children.

A self-governed individual must assess what he’s facing, in this case indestructible error; study the motives of its adherents coolly, pray for the courage and guidance they lack, take the longer view and move against their shortcomings for the duration of this age’s struggle. We can sustain.
